Disinfectants Sprayed As Toll Mounts After Quake

Times News Services

TABAS, Iran — Light planes sprayed disinfectants today to ward off epidemics caused by Iran's worst earthquake in a decade and the world's worst earthquake to date this year.

As many as 20,000 deaths are now feared and an estimated 6,000 persons believed injured by the devastation at the oasis town of Tabas and 100 surrounding villages, some 500 miles southeast of Tehran, 40 of which were destroyed.

Tabas was the worst hit, with only 2,000 of its 13,000 inhabitants surviving, many of them injured.

The strong aroma of the disinfectants was tainted by the noticeable evidence of death as diggers wearing white masks shovelled through tons of rubble three days after the massive tremor flattened the garden city of date groves, melons, orchards and cotton fields.

Cloth-wrapped bodies, some frozen in grotesque postures of sudden death, were lined up under palm trees, while the gravediggers worked, unable to keep ahead of the steady stream of dead.

Friends and relatives identified the dead as workers pulled the bodies from the rubble. The living slapped and struck themselves in the ritual of grief.

The Iranian army sent 700 soldiers, four medical teams and numerous rescue workers to help in relief operations.

And the Iranian air force flew dozens of flights Monday to take the injured to Tehran, where air force commander Lt. Gen. Amir Hossein Rabii supervised the transfer to military hospitals equipped to cope with complicated treatment.

One such flight ended in tragedy. Nine persons, including an air force general and two civilian women, died

OCT. 18 SET FOR SASK. VOTE

REGINA (CP) — A general election will be held in Saskatchewan on Wednesday, Oct. 18, Premier Allan Blakeney announced today.

Blakeney was expected to call an election for this fall after Prime Minister Trudeau indicated there would be no federal election until the spring.

Saskatchewan's NDP government came to power in 1971 and was returned in June, 1975.

Blakeney normally would have sought another mandate next June, but Canada's only NDP premier did not want a federal and provincial election at the same time.

PEACE THREAT

OAS to Mediate Nicaragua Crisis

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The permanent council of the Organization of American States (OAS), concerned that the political crisis in Nicaragua poses a threat to peace in the Caribbean, voted Monday to convene a meeting of OAS foreign ministers Thursday to mediate the situation.

Even as the council met, Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza's troops were reported massing for an assault on the last major rebel stronghold, the northwest town of Esteli.

Observers said the national guard, Somoza's army, flew combat-toughened troops to Somoto, 64 kilometres north of Esteli, in a flanking movement Monday.

The OAS council ruled that a foreign ministers meeting is in order because of events "which affect the peace, and which create a situation of an urgent nature and of common interest for the nations of the hemisphere."

Among the 25 OAS nations, Paraguay cast the lone dissenting vote and Trinidad abstained.

Venezuelan Ambassador Jose Machin, who made the proposal 10 days ago, said a situation of "true genocide" prevails in Nicaragua. He accused Nicaragua's National Guard of placing women and children in the line of fire to discourage leftist guerrillas from shooting.

He said U.S. and South Vietnamese mercenaries have gone to Nicaragua to defend the regime of President Somoza.

Nicaraguan Ambassador Guillermo Sevilla-Sacasa blamed the Somoza regime's problems on international terrorism, "which counts on the support of Venezuela."

Venezuela sent a squadron of planes to Costa Rica following reports last week that Nicaraguan planes strafed an area in northern Costa Rica near its border with Nicaragua. Costa Rica has no military forces of its own.

Nicaragua contends that leftist guerrillas have been using Costa Rica as a springboard for attacks on the Somoza regime.

Sevilla-Sacasa said leftist guerrillas who attacked the Nicaraguan border town of Penas Blancas over the weekend had support from an unidentified plane. He suggested the plane was part of the squadron Venezuela had sent to Costa Rica.

He said communism is to blame for the accelerating political crisis in Nicaragua, which began four weeks ago with a successful Sandinista guerrilla attack on the National Palace in Managua.

Meanwhile in Nicaragua, informed sources said the guard probably will push into Esteli from the south and north while bottling the city up with ambushes on three rural roads that wind up into the surrounding hills. This might prevent the rebels escaping as they did when the guard recaptured Masaya in the south and Leon and Chinandega in the northwest.

CRASH KILLS WOMAN

Dead is Irene Myretta Holstein of 307-885 Dunsmuir.

Colwood RCMP said the woman was the driver and sole occupant of a car that smashed into a rock face and flipped over near Kangaroo Road at 12:05 a.m.

A spokesman said Mrs. Holstein was pinned under the vehicle and died instantly from head injuries.

Ambulance driver Robert Leard, 35, was unhurt.

The ambulance was on an emergency run to McDonald's restaurant at Saanich and Oak where a man and woman had overdosed on drugs.

The two, who were in the back of a truck parked in the restaurant lot, were taken to Royal Jubilee by another ambulance.

VORSTER STALLS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Prime Minister John Vorster kept South Africans guessing today about whether he will step down from office, delaying an expected announcement until at least Wednesday and fueling an already bitter battle over a successor.

MISTY MORNING greeted Greater Victoria area commuters today as first fall fogs started to roll in. Sun eventually burned away the damp haze but driving, especially in the very early hours, was hazardous because of restricted visibility. Police suggest drivers slow down a bit heading to work.

MAIL STRIKES BEGIN FRIDAY

OTTAWA (CP) — The 19,000-member Letter Carriers Union of Canada will begin rotating strikes across the country Friday to back contract demands, officials announced today.

Union president Robert McGarry told a news conference the decision not to call a full-scale national walkout was made to allow for delivery of family allowance and old age pension cheques mailed by the federal government at the end of the month.

McGarry said there are no talks scheduled between the federal government and union negotiators to divert the midnight Thursday strike deadline.

McGarry said the federal government's refusal to resume negotiations, stalled on the question of wage increases, is "irresponsible."

The mail carriers have asked for a six-per-cent increase in basic salaries as well as a cost-of-living adjustment to protect the membership from past and future inflation.

Prime Minister Trudeau has threatened to legislate an end to any postal strike if it damaged the economy.

Davis Fined, On Probation

A total of 15 years of elected office for Jack Davis came to an end Monday when he was fined and placed on probation for fraud — the same day he announced his resignation as an MLA.

Davis, a former federal and B.C. cabinet minister, appeared shaken and disoriented outside Vancouver county court after he was fined $1,000 and placed on two months probation for defrauding the provincial government.

"I don't understand," he said. "Naturally I feel terrible."

Davis, 62, was convicted Sept. 11 of defrauding the B.C. government of $1,074 by misrepresenting his travel expenses. Court was told he exchanged first-class tickets for economy and kept the cash difference.

Davis's resignation as Social Credit MLA for North Vancouver-Seymour was made to Speaker Harvey Schroeder Friday and announced in court Monday.

It is not clear when a byelection might be held to fill the seat.

The Constitution Act says the Speaker "may" notify the deputy provincial secretary upon receipt of an MLA's resignation and the deputy then has six months to issue an election writ.

Whether Davis would be eligible to run in a byelection is also uncertain and it is unknown whether he would even consider such a step.

In Kelowna, Premier Bill Bennett said in a prepared statement he regretted what Davis had gone through and thanked the former minister for his long service to the province.

"It is difficult to accept the reality of a colleague's announced resignation under such unfortunate circumstances. Those of us who are in public life realize how difficult it can be and we accept that."

Bennett gave no indication when a byelection might be called.

Sherman Hood, lawyer for Davis, argued in court that an absolute discharge would be appropriate since the fraud charge, trial and conviction had already damaged his client significantly.

He said Davis' removal from the cabinet, public disgrace, loss of position and income as well as his resignation as MLA amounted to punishment exceeding the seriousness of the crime.

But Judge J. J. Anderson, although expressing personal sympathy for Davis's "agonizing embarrassment and humiliation" and acknowledging his long public service, said a breach of public trust had occurred.

Syria, Jordan Reject Accord

Times News Services

Saudi Arabia and Jordan have both rejected the Middle East peace agreement worked out at Camp David.

But the statement hinted that Saudi Arabia would not oppose Egypt's efforts to regain its occupied territory from Israel.

"In spite of its reservations, the Saudi government does not consider that it has a right to interfere in the internal affairs of any Arab country or to oppose such a country's right to regain its lost territories by way of armed struggle or through peaceful efforts as long as these do not contradict the higher Arab interests," the statement said.

CONSUMER CREDIT UP 14%

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer credit on the books of monthly-reporting credit holders totalled $27.1 billion at the end of July, up 14.4 per cent from a year earlier, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

Most of the total, $20.9 billion, was accounted for by chartered bank personal loans. The increase over the year in that category was 16.7 per cent.

Sales finance and consumer loan company loans were valued at $2.8 billion, while loans owed by consumers to department, furniture and appliance stores totalled $1.4 billion. Policy loans by life insurance companies were valued at $1.3 billion and personal loans by trust and mortgage companies totalled $580 million.

Including quarterly reporting firms, the total consumer credit at the end of the second quarter of 1978 was $33.4 billion, up 13.8 per cent from a year earlier.

Investors Sell Canadian $$

Times News Services

The Canadian dollar continued to move lower in early trading today after suffering its sharpest one-day drop Monday since Aug. 25.

Heavy selling on international money markets Monday pushed the dollar down three-eighths of a cent against its American counterpart.

In New York at noon today, the dollar was down 3/25 at 85.42.

Traders described the market Monday as "one-way down" with big investors quickly selling their Canadian dollars for currencies they felt were more secure.

The financial daily quoted market participants as questioning an apparent lack of policy by Ottawa to deal with the dollar's slide.

The U.S. dollar weakened today on most major European money markets. Dealers said the optimism over Middle East peace prospects, which pushed up exchange rates Monday, has faded.

Weaker Growth in '79 Forecast

OTTAWA (CP) — A weaker outlook for the U.S. economy and a new restrictive federal spending policy mean reduced economic growth in 1979, a major economic forecasting agency predicted today.

The Conference Board in Canada, which includes representation from business, labor and government sectors, said in a quarterly forecast that the economy will expand at a real rate of 3.7 per cent next year compared with four per cent this year.

In July, before the recent announcement of federal spending cuts, the board had predicted growth in 1979 of 4.1 per cent.

As growth of five per cent is required annually for a reduction in unemployment, the jobless rate is expected to continue rising throughout both years to nine per cent.

The board predicted an increase in the consumer price index this year of nine per cent, with moderation to 7.5 per cent next year.

Lawrence Murphy, chief economist with the board, said federal spending cuts of about $2 billion in the 1979-80 fiscal year, which were announced recently by Finance Minister Jean Chretien and Treasury Board President Robert Andras, could reduce growth by one-quarter of a percentage point.

But he said this negative impact could be offset through income tax cuts. Chretien has promised a budget later this year which could provide an opportunity for the government to cut taxes.

Murphy said the four increases in the Bank of Canada interest rate since last February, plus a downward revision announced last week in money supply growth, will "tend to choke off" investment and consumer spending.

These would reinforce the restrictive influence of the government's spending cuts, he said.

The board forecast also notes that since early 1975 economic growth in the U.S. has been vigorous, leading to demand for exports.

"More recently growth in output in that country has moderated and prospects are for an even more severe slowdown in 1979," the board says.

"This implies that exports of goods from Canada will decelerate and, consequently, the balance of trade will no longer be the chief source of economic expansion."

An increase in exports of merchandise exports of 8.7 per cent this year will fall to about 3.4 per cent in 1979 and there will be a continuing deterioration in the services side of the trade balance, the board predicts.

Inflation, led by food price increases, has eroded household incomes and thereby reduced spending on consumer goods and weakened the investment climate, the board says.

Total consumer spending in real terms will grow by four per cent this year, dropping to about 3.5 per cent in 1979 in response to higher direct and indirect taxes, the board said.

Next month, retail sales taxes in most provinces rise to their levels of last April as the federally-inspired reduction in the tax ends.

Airport Squeeze Worse

The federal government can't afford to delay expansion of the Pat Bay Airport much longer or the terminal will be unable to cope with the growing traffic, a ministry of transport official said today.

Donald McArthur, acting supervisor of terminal services for the Pacific region, said Pat Bay only has 14,444 square feet of terminal space and it needed 20,000 square feet back in 1973.

Overcrowding gets worse month-by-month, he said.

"Unless something is done soon, there will be a total breakdown of all facilities there. There will be too many people in too small a space."

The ministry has a plan on the drawing boards for a $6.9 million expansion to provide 48,700 square feet of space.

The plan will go to the federal cabinet for approval in late 1979 or early 1980.

If approved, construction could be completed in 18 months.

The expanded building would be large enough to handle expected traffic up to 1990.

McArthur said meetings with all carriers using the building will be held early next year and three or four designs will be discussed with them. Once a design is selected, a request for funding will go to Ottawa.

This request could not go to cabinet until the next fiscal year, April 1, 1979, to March 31, 1980, he said.

At the present time there are 500,000 passengers per year using the terminal. This is expected to double in 12 years.

As announced earlier, any expansion would restore Victoria's status as an international airport because customs facilities would be expanded.

International traffic has been limited because of crowding in the customs section.

Ministry of transport officials would like to see construction completed by the end of 1981 but everything depends upon speedy approval by Ottawa, once application is made.

Expansion has been discussed for several years but the present round of planning began in February.

Pair Found Off Coast

SEATTLE (AP) — Two men missing aboard a single engine float plane off the Washington coast were found early today, clinging to the plane's pontoons, authorities said.

David Andre of Port Angeles and Clay Philbrick were reported in good condition after they were plucked from the water about 30 kilometres west of Cape Johnson in the La Push area.

Coast Guard spokesman Bruce Simikat said it appears the plane crashed and the two men managed to stay afloat by grabbing the pontoons.

$150,000 PAYOFF 'NOT WORTH BOTHER'

TORONTO (CP) — The vice-president and chief engineer of C. A. Pitts Engineering Construction Co. Ltd. testified Monday that it would not have been worth the bother for his company to make a $150,000 payoff to win a 1973 dredging job near Manitoulin Island.

Alexander Drummond said his company's former president, Sydney Cooper, was willing to sacrifice some of C. A. Pitts's projected profits to get a 1973 dredging contract in South Baymouth, Ont.

However, he said Crown allegations of a $150,000 payoff to potential competitors would have meant that profits from the job would not cover the company's overhead.

Drummond was testifying as a defence witness for Cooper, among 11 men and nine companies, including C. A. Pitts, charged with conspiring to defraud public agencies of more than $4.2 million by rigging bids on dredging contracts between 1969 and 1975. The South Baymouth contract is one of the seven counts listed in the indictment.

Drummond, an employee of C. A. Pitts for 21 years and in charge of its marine division responsible for dredging since 1973, said his company cut its contingency fund on the South Baymouth contract by $50,000 because the company needed the work.

He said the cuts would have reduced profits on the job to $286,000 from $302,000.

Drummond told the court he knew of no collusion between dredging companies over the South Baymouth contract.

SOCREDS ISSUE BOOK

The Social Credit government has issued a glossy full-color magazine called B.C. Economic Development, three years after criticizing the NDP government of propaganda for a issuing a similar publication titled Land.

The government is sending its 28-page magazine to businesses and professionals in the province and to investors outside B.C., a spokesman said Monday.

He said 75,000 copies have been mailed at a cost of $70,000, or just under $1 apiece.

Records show that the previous government mailed 800,000 copies of its 24-page magazine in September, 1975, to every household in the province at a cost of $150,000 or 20 cents apiece.

Appeal Rejected

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ten unions supporting the 40-day-old strike of 1,600 pressmen against the city's three major dailies Monday rejected an appeal from the papers to return to work.

TOBACCO FIRMS SUED IN LUNG CANCER DEATH

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Francisco attorney Melvin Belli has filed a Superior Court suit seeking "well in excess" of $1 million from three tobacco companies for allegedly causing the lung cancer death of a woman.

The woman, Anna Mae Jaquez, of Pacifica, Calif., died at a San Francisco nursing home last June at the age of 45. Belli said she had smoked two packs of cigarettes a day for years and had been unable to stop despite pleas from her children.

The suit alleges American Tobacco Co., Philip Morris and the R.J. Reynolds Co., "negligently and carelessly sold, distributed and delivered (the) cigarettes so as to cause them to be defective, dangerous, contaminated, adulterated, impure, deleterious and unsafe for the use and purpose for which they were intended."

'Can't Put Revolution On Trial'

MILAN, Italy (UPI) — Red Brigades leader Corrado Alunni, believed to be the mastermind behind the kidnapping and killing of former Premier Aldo Moro, defiantly told an Italian court today "you cannot put revolution on trial."

Smiling sarcastically, the 30-year-old urban guerrilla, chained at the wrists and guarded by a dozen policemen, accused news media of misrepresenting him and scoffed at the charges brought against him — weapons possession and subversive activity.

"I must stress the amount of fabrications the press has published in recent days," Alunni told the court. "It is understandable that these hired writers tried to turn me into a totally invented circus character."

Before the court president cut him short, the blue-jean-clad Alunni called his trial "a symbol, an execution, a beheading.

"We are confronted with a mystification," Alunni said. "You cannot put revolution on trial in a country where there is so much unemployment, destruction of resources and shutdowns of factories."

The Milan courthouse was guarded by about 100 police and everyone who entered the court was checked for weapons by a metal detector.

But the proceeding ended in 15 minutes, with the court adjourning until Wednesday to give the defense time to study the charges.

Alunni was brought to the courtroom from the high security San Vittore prison and immediately after his lawyers asked for a delay, he discharged them and said he did not intend to be defended.

The court then appointed another lawyer to defend him and gave the lawyer 24 hours to study the case.

The security net at the trial was considerably less than the 5,000 policemen who were deployed in Turin from March to June for the trial of Red Brigades founder Renato Curcio and 46 other urban guerrillas. That trial was held in a converted army barracks.

HAVE COWS ON MILKY WAY GONE DRY?

OLDHAM, England (CP) — British UFO experts believe that alien beings from another planet are studying British cows.

They say three men saw a flying saucer land in a field outside this northwest Lancashire town. Four strange entities, with long ears, emerged from the saucer carrying a device which resembled a bird cage.

"They then proceeded to take close measurements of some cows in a field," said Jennie Randles, secretary of the Northern UFO Research Association.

Miss Randles, a 26-year-old audio-visual technologist, declared: "Most of the reports we get come from high, moorland areas stretching from Oldham, Lancashire, to the Lake District. We want people to come to us with their reports so we can investigate and substantiate them."

She said the UFO association is distributing 1,000 copies of a booklet, priced at 90 cents throughout the north of England. Reported in the booklet are:

A fireball which landed on the moors above Oldham; an alien being, about seven feet high, seen at Kirkby near Liverpool; the cow-measurers at Oldham; the blue man with the flowing cape (something like Superman) who was seen floating high above Liverpool.

Still stranger phenomena are reported by the Aetherius Society in London. Its members say they receive regular messages from the planets Mars and Venus and that Jesus Christ is living on Venus.

"His voice has been heard by members of this society at a meeting in London," a spokesman said. "We have a tape-recording of the voice and it dictated a prayer called The New Lord's Prayer."

The spokesman said the society started in 1954 when George King, a 35-year-old white-collar worker, was doing the washing up in his room in Maida Vale, London.

"Suddenly George heard a clear voice, apparently from nowhere, saying: "Prepare yourself. You are to become the voice of Interplanetary Parliament."

"George King was astounded. He had no idea where the voice came from but was determined to find out. He had been practising yoga persistently and went into meditation, intending to stay like that till he knew."

Korchnoi Keeps Gurus at Arm's Length

Times News Services

BAGUIO, Philippines — Challenger Viktor Korchnoi today quickly cut his official links with two American gurus rather than forfeit the 24th game of the world chess championships to his opponent.

Korchnoi agreed to the official cut, but made it clear he would maintain unofficial ties to the Americans and to the Ananda Marga sect which they represent.

The gurus, Stephen Dwyer, 28, of Kansas City, and Victoria Sheppard, 31, of Maryland, were convicted last May of the attempted murder of an Indian diplomat. They are out on bail appealing the conviction and 17-year jail sentences.

The convicting judge wrote a lenghty opinion condemning Dwyer, Ms Sheppard and their sect as international terrorists.

When Korchnoi added the two to his official delegation, Karpov aides protested that the tournament had become a sanctuary for criminals.

Match organizer Florencio Campomanes barred the Americans from the playing hall and said if Korchnoi did not remove them from his delegation he would forfeit a match to Karpov.

Korchnoi began meditating with the sect members Sept. 2, after he complained that a Russian parapsychologist with the Karpov team was trying to hypnotize him.

Karpov, who leads the tournament four games to two, has since been unable to crack Korchnoi's defenses for another win.

Korchnoi, playing black, seized the initiative late in the game and seemed to be trying for a win. But most experts thought a draw is likely when they resume the adjourned game Wednesday.

Karpov leads the match with four victories against two defeats. He needs two more wins to retain the championship. Draws do not count.

Pastor Sets Fire to Self

BERLIN (UPI) — East German pastor Rolf Guenther burned himself to death while conducting a service in the Holy Cross Church in Falkenstein, East Germany, Sunday, the East German Union of Evangelical Churches announced today.

Guenther, 41, poured inflammable liquid over his body, then picked up an altar candle and set himself on fire with it in full view of 400 worshippers, the report said.

Flames and heat drove would-be helpers back and Guenther could not be saved, the report said.

As pastor of the Holy Cross Church in Falkenstein, a small textile town about 60 miles south of Leipzig, Guenther had been tortured by "personal worries and purely religious tensions about points of Christian belief," according to the Union of Evangelical Churches' announcement.

The announcement said there were "absolutely no indications" that Guenther's suicide had a political motive.

In August, 1976, another East German pastor, Oskar Bruesewitz, hung a notice round his neck saying, "The churches accuse communism of suppressing young people," then set himself on fire.

Immunity Legislation In Carter's Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation curtailing the diplomatic immunity enjoyed by thousands of foreign embassy personnel in the U.S. capital has been approved by Congress and sent to President Carter.

The bill will for the first time make more than 10,000 of the approximately 19,000 foreign embassy personnel in Washington subject to some types of civil suits in U.S. courts. However, the measure will continue the immunity all embassy personnel have from criminal prosecution.

Final congressional action on the measure was taken Monday when the House of Representatives agreed to Senate amendments.

The bill will retain full immunity from both criminal and civil court actions enjoyed by 8,000 top-ranking diplomats and their family members.

Another 2,900 technical and administrative workers in the embassies will retain full immunity from criminal prosecution but will not be immune from civil suits not involving their official duties. The approximately 7,000 family members of the technical and administrative staff will have no immunity from civil suits.

Backers of measure say the United States has been far more lenient in granting diplomatic immunity than most other countries.

There have been complaints that some embassy employees have used the immunity to avoid paying bills, traffic tickets and auto liability claims.

A Fragile Thing

After the buildup of euphoria created by Egyptian president Anwar Sadat's remarkable visit to Israel earlier this year to break the logjam in mideast peace negotiations — and the letdown that followed, with good will degenerating into bitter recriminations — one hesitates to welcome the new Camp David peace accord with unreserved hallelujahs.

Perhaps it does deserve to be hailed as "a great victory for peace," as Israeli prime minister Menachem Begin called it, but much the same rhetoric was employed earlier this year. Whether Begin's claim is justified or not depends on the further resolution of many other controversial points, and upon the peace plan's reception in the rest of the Middle East.

So far, it has had a rough going over. The Palestine Liberation Organization, which wasn't mentioned in the documents signed by Begin, Sadat and U.S. president Jimmy Carter on Sunday night, called Sadat a "political whore" and accused him of selling out. Syria denounced the agreement and said it will fight on with the PLO.

Whether these are just expressions of outraged impotence at the realization that the keystone in any armed struggle against Israel — Egypt, the most populous and heavily-armed of the front-line Arab states — has agreed to absent itself from any further warfare, or whether Syria and the PLO are able to mount military actions of their own which will sabotage any peace treaties, are imponderables which only the coming months will answer.

Another stumbling block may be Begin himself; he seems to be retreating somewhat from the conceptions he created in Washington. He told Israeli reporters that Israel intends to keep its own soldiers in the West Bank after the five-year transition period specified in the Camp David agreement.

This is not what was understood in Washington, or by the Egyptians. Begin also has certainly undermined his Egyptian friend with his observation that Israel has given no final commitment not to establish new settlements in the West Bank. This may be an accurate, legalistic reading of the Camp David agreement — which stated that Israel would not establish new settlements "during the negotiations for majority rule" — but it is not helpful in maintaining the momentum for peace. The truce choreographed by Carter is a fragile thing, and almost anything could untrack the whole process.

Blatant Insensitivity

It is easy to understand why Prime Minister Trudeau is a bit frustrated with the attitude taken by the provincial governments on the issue of constitutional reform. With few exceptions, the provinces have found it much easier to say what they are against than what they are for — and what they are against is any idea put forward by the federal government. Of the few ideas the provinces have given, most have been tired re-runs of scripts first put forward and rejected years ago.

All the same, it is much more difficult to understand the blatant insensitivity of the prime minister in his latest response to the premiers on the issue. The basic message that comes through in a telegram from Trudeau to Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney, chairman of the last premiers' conference, is: Get lost, provinces — constitutional reform is none of your business.

The suggestion from the premiers that the provinces ought to have significant say in reforms affecting the monarchy and changing the Senate to a House of the Federation has been rejected by Trudeau with the comment that it is a "direct and sweeping" intrusion by the provinces into matters of strictly federal jurisdiction.

The prime minister is surely jesting. If not, he is perhaps the only Canadian extant who believes that the provinces will not be profoundly affected by the changes Ottawa is proposing. It may be true that the provinces now have little say in the Senate (does it matter when the Senate does so little?) but they will surely have a great deal to say in the House of the Federation since it is expected to be a chamber in which provincial aims and aspirations will be paramount. Surely it is unreasonable that a chamber in which the provinces will be expected to participate could be set up without their consent.

The monarchy too is of direct concern to the provinces because, among other things, of their concern with the role and appointment of lieutenant-governors. It would be difficult to make changes in the role of the Queen and the governor-general without also affecting the provincial Crown representatives.

For Trudeau to dismiss provincial concerns about these items with a wave of the hand is surely for him to invite increasing hostility from the premiers when he tries to work out other federal-provincial agreements with them. Worse, it must also appear to the Canadian public as another indication of the prime minister's arrogant attitude towards even the reasonable concerns of this country's diverse regions and provinces.

A Good Appointment

One of the best appointments made recently by the Social Credit government must be that of Geoff Mortimer to the chairmanship of the B.C. Police Commission.

Mortimer has been acting chairman of the commission for the past several months and has shown to policeman and public alike his interest and ability in developing first-class police forces across B.C. Although he first joined the RCMP before the Second World War began, he is always willing to look at the merits of new ways of doing things — often more willing than men younger and less experienced than himself.

His four years of experience with the B.C. sheriff's service, in which he was largely responsible for pulling a long-neglected agency into a relatively modern and efficient group, has proved his administrative capabilities — and also his ability to get government to do what he thinks is needed.

His appointment should be a good one for B.C.'s municipal police forces and for the public that relies so heavily upon its law enforcement officers.

RICHARD GWYN

Losing Our Trust in Trudeau

OTTAWA — It is worthwhile, these days, to recall why former premier Robert Bourassa lost the Quebec election of 1976. Separatism wasn't the reason. Nor were the mistakes Bourassa had made in this or that program. Nor were, though they did make a difference, economic hard times. The real reason was that Quebecers had become ashamed of Bourassa.

Bourassa's actual record was by no means that bad. His much-criticized James Bay power project is today both pillar and safety net for the entire Quebec economy. Few of the many accusations of corruption made against his government have been proven.

Yet Quebecers had grown sick of Bourassa. Sick of his apparent cynicism and moral shallowness. Sick of the "politics of fear," which was Bourassa's sole intellectual argument against the Parti Quebecois. They just no longer trusted him.

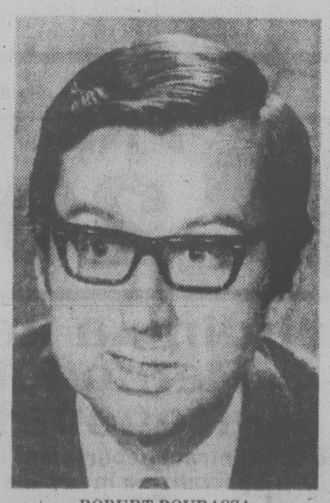
Tragic Figure

It's a personal and a political tragedy. Remember, we are not talking about just another politician. We are talking about someone whom U.S. Vice-President Walter Mondale has called "a priceless asset to the industrialized world," and who can connect with all the international giants, like Fidel Castro of Cuba, like Julius Nyere of Tanzania, like Helmut Schmidt of West Germany, as can few others, and among them no other Canadians.

The polls, except those taken in Quebec, show what is happening. The answers to the conventional question, "Who would you vote for if . . . ," aren't that important. The responses that matter are those which show Trudeau scoring lower and lower marks for trust, for honesty, for credibility.

Leaders who are unpopular are scarcely new. Indeed, these are almost impossible times — economic difficulties without end; the social disorientation expressed by the phrase the "Me Generation" — for any leader to retain his popularity. Yet the public's withdrawal of trust, which is the ultimate rejection, happens to very few leaders, as it did to Bourassa, as it did to former U.S. president Richard Nixon.

This attitude — it amounts to contempt — was exemplified by an extraordinary incident at Trudeau's press conference last week. A CBC reporter asked a question that began as a routine inquiry about the many changes in government policy on everything from unemployment insurance to capital punishment. The reporter ended up with what amounted to a verbal slap of Trudeau's face: "Some people say yours is the most cynical government in memory. How do you respond?"



ROBERT BOURASSA
. . . Quebecers ashamed of him

In memory, no question like it has been asked of any prime minister. To have asked it, of Lester Pearson, of John Diefenbaker, of Louis St. Laurent, would have been not so much rude and impertinent as unthinkable.

Reporters ask many foolish questions at press conferences. Even the most foolish question, though, derives from some context that legitimizes it. An everyday equivalent to a question which has no context, and which therefore would be unthinkable is to imagine yourself suddenly asking a happily married couple: "When do you plan to divorce?"

The CBC reporter's question thus was far more important than Trudeau's answer. The CBC reporter's immediate interest was in capital punishment.

For a fortnight, prime ministerial aides have hinted to reporters that the government might change its policy and allow a referendum to be held on capital punishment. Then Justice Minister Otto Lang said publicly that he personally favored such a referendum as a way to dissipate "disrespect for the law."

Hedged and Dodged

Asked, at his press conference, what was going on, Trudeau hedged, dodged, and fudged. The question of a referendum on capital punishment was "closed." Yet the question of using referendums as "instruments of direct democracy" to decide contentious issues like capital punishment was "open." I remain to be convinced.

It isn't worth the effort to try to figure out what Trudeau is saying. Just write it off to political word games.

If you do that, you are dismissing more than Trudeau's words. You are dismissing his word itself. If Trudeau cannot be believed when he talks about something he once committed himself to with such passion — to retain capital punishment, Trudeau has said, "would be to abandon reason for vengeance" — is his word about anything believable?

Anyone's answer to that question, yours, mine, Trudeau's, isn't that important. To be able to ask the question itself, as almost everyone now is doing, is all that matters. This withdrawal of trust, rather than Trudeau's increasingly probable defeat in the next election, is his tragedy.

Private Schools

May I reply to the recently published letter of Ian Bruce Kelsey, who writes as president of "Canadians United for Separation of Church and State" about independent schools?

Mr. Kelsey rightly states that ". . . there are many complex aspects to the whole church-state involvement . . .". It seems contradictory then that he proceeds immediately to deal with the issue of funding independent schools on the basis of the simplistic suggestion that there are only two kinds of education: religious and nonreligious. He does not deal, however, with the very basic question of what education is, or how one arrives at an appropriate educational programme.

All systems of education, whether we call them private, parochial, independent, alternative or public, must deal with basic questions such as: Who is the child? What is the purpose of life? What is life? What rights and obligations does a person have, and to whom? Such questions must be asked before deciding on a valid and meaningful educational program. How else do we meet people's needs? But these questions are value-laden. They are in fact "religious" questions. They deal with origins, futures, right and wrong. The answers to these questions do not come out of objective test tube laboratory experiments. Answers to these questions are based on firmly held opinions, or beliefs. In philosophical terminology the bases are called a priori, and in religious language they are called faith commitments or doctrines. In essence there is no difference.

The answers given to these questions by the public system are just as expressive of a value system as the answers supplied by any of the independent schools. In a democracy, justice demands that governments do not discriminate against certain sets of values, directly or indirectly. The expression of preference would be discriminating against minorities who hold different views.

Thus government, having assumed the reponsibility of funding education, should fund all systems, without favor to any one system, hence without favor to any one set of values. This is the only fair way of funding, especially because society has also decreed, rightly or wrongly, that education in a certain age span is compulsory, and must meet standards, or societal expectations. Funding should be withheld only when schools fail to demonstrate that they are educationally responsible. And even here the question can be fairly raised, "Educationally responsible by whose standards?"

In a nutshell then, the independent schools argue that public funding simply provides payment for services rendered, services needed by significant minorities in society. As long as minorities do not infringe on the rights of the majority, what is the real objection?

The separation of church and state is not at issue at all in the funding of independent schools. Why should society not pay a church for a service which it requires by law, and which meet its need, as is the case in denominational hospitals? Or does Mr. Kelsy imply that a welfare recipient may not buy the goods he needs at a sale which benefits a church, or any other privately run agency? In neither case is the church or the state compromised.

We have in Canada a long history of healthy co-operation between church and state. We do not have to import artificial, American constitutional embargoes.

The B.C. government has taken a courageous step towards removing a festering injustice, and towards bringing an end to an unfair distribution of taxes collected for the purpose of educating all our young people.

Eventually all provinces will have to provide funding for other than only public schools, or expand on current provisions, if we are serious about the survival of western democracy.

Rather than repealing the Independent Schools Support Act, its application should be expanded so that there will be easier access for everyone to the school of his choice regardless of economic status. — Gerry Ensing, Executive Director, Federation of Independent Schools Associations.

Come to Alberta, where living for seniors is easier: low taxes, better care.

Advice for Seniors

Under the title "Good News . . . But (Times, Sept. 1) one of your correspondents, Mr. Simpson, published an excellent letter pointing out the frustration of those forgotten senior citizens who provided for their own retirement and who do not qualify for the latest handouts either provincial or federal.

I do agree 100 per cent with what the author of this letter has said, with the exception of the conclusion that calls our own savings "useless." I do not believe they are useless. In the first place, even though they do not put us far ahead financially of those receiving all sorts of benefits under various names at taxpayers' cost of astronomical $10 million, they leave us with a just sense of pride and dignity because we are standing up on our two feet. We are not dependent totally or partially from the government, that is, from the pockets of our fellow men. From a practical point of view, if we consider the situation unjust and unfair (as it really is) we can do something about it: we have several options open to us.

We can move to Alberta where there are no sales taxes and provincial income tax, especially for senior citizens, is lower than in B.C. Many other benefits also are exempt from a means test.

If the physical climate of Alberta is too cold to endure (and believe me, it is!) we can still do some major shopping in that province not to pay the five per cent sales tax here; it is perfectly legal, as it is legal to make some purchases in Oregon state within custom rules.

Finally, we have our ballots at election time. We can approach MLAs, MPs and even cabinet ministers to find out whether or not and to what extent they are willing to improve an intolerable situation. We need commitment, not promises which are forgotten the day after the election. Alberta voters, for example, a few years ago had a very very strong and seemingly unbeatable Social Credit government. The official opposition was limited to five or six Progressive Conservatives who weren't even given a chance by the media and the public at large.

Well, we all know what happened over there — Peter Lougheed became the premier of that province and since that day a much enlightened, humane, just policy concerning retired citizens not on social assistance (GAIN, NEED, SAFER and so on) has been implemented with very good results. Our leaders of all political parties should study it. A trip to Edmonton is not that expensive. — E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

Thorn Birds

I remain perturbed by the book review, written so inanely by Pat Barclay, of Colleen McCullough's Thorn Birds (Prevue magazine, Sept. 2).

It would appear there is much that Pat Barclay does not understand about the author and her best-seller. So what does she do? She produces the usual dull and hackneyed topic of sex and elaborates on it.

The story of Thorn Birds is relatively free of lewdness and sex scenes. What are there are straight, beautifully and carefully written. Maybe Pat Barclay is unaware that the manuscript was returned to the author with the publisher's request for extra sex scenes, which is tantamount to what Barclay wishes to do in her review.

No, the story is not about "in a nutshell" — "a heroine who is free to be as attractive and flirtatious as she chooses, with little or no sexual consequences." Nor is there only one heroine; the saga produces its heroine for every generation.

Having lived parts of my life in the vast Australian outback, I can assure Pat Barclay the characters are convincingly true to life.

Thorn Birds is masterfully written; Colleen McCullough can say so much in one sentence, while the North American Harlequin writers are still searching for more prepositions. Her crisp and concise descriptions are a delight, perhaps more readily understood by those who know the country and people.

No, Miss McCullough has not exploited a female sexual fantasy to produce a grand best seller. Nor has she found it necessary to produce sexual adventures to give color to the lives of the many male characters of the land. Their everyday living is color enough. Miss McCullough's background knowledge is comprehensive and not only of Australia, but wherever she moves her characters. I can well believe her lectures at Yale University are just as comprehensive. It might be well if Pat Barclay could take in just one of them. — A. Joy Humphreys, 637 Linden Avenue.

Industrial Park: No!

We are writing concerning the rural property in the vicinity of Interurban Road and Mann and Courtland Avenues.

We strongly feel that the value of this property lies in its rural-agricultural nature. It is a valuable greenbelt as well as a necessary watershed for Colquitz Creek. The effect of any construction on drainage, pollution and wildlife cannot help but be severe and detrimental. Furthermore the establishment of any kind of industrial park in this location will contribute to the already serious problem of urban sprawl. It will create traffic congestion in a residential-agricultural area and will decrease the quality of life for the residents in that area, and for the whole of Saanich.

If there is a necessity for an industrial development, we sincerely hope that the council will see fit to locate it in a more populated area, closer to already developed highways. Why use farmland, a very real enhancement to the Greater Victoria area? — David and Janet Renfroe, 347 Conway Rd.

'The Army is Everywhere in Iran'

By WILLIAM CLAIBORNE
The Washington Post

TEHRAN — Rising majestically in smog-shrouded downtown Tehran, with its spectacular view of 19,000-foot Mount Damavand, the new headquarters of the Rastakhiz Party is a monument to the one-party dream of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi, imperial ruler of Iran.

It is an imposing structure, in size and architecture, and it is topped by a broad, overhanging helicopter-landing platform as if to vaunt Iran's breakneck race into the 20th century.

But beset by construction delays and squabbling within the Rastakhiz, the skyscraper is still empty three years after the founding of the party that the Shah envisioned as a melting pot for differing views within Iran's diverse society.

About three miles southeast of the Rastakhiz headquarters at bustling Jaleh Square, the barrel of a squat British-made Chieftain tank pokes menacingly toward onrushing traffic, and Iranian soldiers with automatic rifles and bandoliers stand poised, bayonets fixed.

It is here that thousands of angry demonstrators scattered in terror earlier this month when the soldiers opened fire with their automatic weapons, leaving the square strewn with possibly hundreds of bodies and blood-stained placards demanding "Death to the Shah."

The hauntingly empty Rastakhiz building and the siege-like atmosphere of Jaleh Square provide striking images of a deeply troubled nation and underline recurrent questions about the shah's total control of his country.

After 15 years of unshakable authority, is the shah losing his grip on Iran? By trying to implement his much-heralded liberalization program, has he unleashed forces he cannot control?

Iranian women soldiers, part of largest army in Persian Gulf region

While it would be overstating the case to suggest that the shah is on the verge of being run from his throne, it would be understating it to deny that a new situation exists in Iran, and that the future of the monarchy is less certain than it once was.

The shah's "White Revolution" — the frenetic oil-fed development boom that affronted many leaders of Iran's 33 million Shiite Moslems and triggered the unrest here — is foundering. The boom has levelled out, oil production has slipped, the labor force has proved inadequate and rampant inflation has worsened the quality of life for many.

Moreover, Iran has become so rife with land speculation, political corruption and conspicuous consumption by the favored class that thousands of previously apolitical and poor Iranians have become disillusioned and were easily stirred into opposition.

The Rastakhiz, Iran's only legal political party, is in such disarray that the shah himself at a recent press conference voiced disappointment over its development.

Even though the shah has made clear that he is not thinking of returning to a multiparty system, some politicians have announced their intention to desert or ignore the Rastakhiz and form their own splinter parties.

While just a year ago it would have been unthinkable to call publicly for an end of the government, now deputies in parliament are standing up and boldly blaming Prime Minister Jaafar Sharif-Emani of misfeasance and accusing him of lying about how many anti-shah demonstrators were killed this month.

Presumably under the eyes of agents of SAVAK — the shah's secret police — protesters are passing out leaflets attributed to exiled Moslem leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini urging further resistance and suggesting that soldiers turn their guns on their officers.

Under pressure from the increasingly vocal dissidents, the shah last month inaugurated his "Iranian spring," easing restrictions on freedom of the press and assembly. The result was even more challenges to the monarchy and the disastrous clash this month, which immediately resulted in martial law for the entire country.

While it is too early to tell whether martial law will spawn new violence and new challenges to the throne, one thing is certain: the oppositon by itself cannot take over the government and the only force capable of removing the shah is his highly trained and superbly equipped army.

There are signs of dissension and confusion within the opposition — though exaggerated by the government. But there is no visible disunity in the pampered officer corps of Iran's army, the largest in the Persian Gulf region with more than 300,000 men, plus another 81,000 in the air force.

The army is everywhere in Iran, only minutes away from any trouble. By all appearances it is under the firm control of its officers, who are unflinchingly loyal to the shah. Their morale presumably is boosted by frequent pay raises and enormous acquisitions of the most sophisticated weaponry.

Some members of the opposition are suggesting that any rebellion would come not from the officer corps, but from the disillusoned ranks of enlisted men. There is not much evidence, however, to indicate a real threat at present.

Dissidents report here that in this month's clash, a soldier turned his rifle on his commander, shot him and then killed himself. But that unconfirmed report seems to pale against the seemingly flawless discipline displayed by troops deployed in public places here.

Also, the shah has six months of martial law, which could easily be extended indefinitely, with which to limit his critics' effectiveness.

The shah also has numerous fallback positions to temporize on the most unpalatable aspects of his authority and, thereby, reduce to some extent the breadth of public support for the opposition.

He already has done this by making symbolic change in his government and by launching a much-publicized anti-corruption drive. While the opposition dismisses these moves as finding a few scapegoats to provide a sop to the restless masses, the actions do create the appearance of reform.

By continuing his liberalization program, the shah obviously hopes to shift the thrust of opposition from violent confrontation to politics.

While he seems not to have found a way yet to broaden the thin borderline between loyal opposition and subversion, observers here do not discount the possibility that the shah can create a situation of delicately harnessed disgruntlement and thereby preserve his regime indefinitely.

El Higgins

Henry Higgins was the first Englishman to become a fully fledged bull fighter. As a matador de toros he thrilled Spanish crowds for almost 10 years.

British newspapers toasted his unlikely success by dubbing him El Higgins.

He was astonishingly brave and even the dangers of bullfighting were not enough for him. He was killed recently at 33, not in the bullring, but in a hang-gliding fall.

Henry had a lot more than courage. He had style . . . although the fact is his bullfighting career was not a financial success.

He could have cashed in as "the English Torero" in tourist bullrings, making sensational but not very dangerous passes, causing all the tourists to scream with excitement. But . . . Henry . . . took the art very seriously and refused to debase it by getting involved in gimmicks.

As a boy, his principal interest was cricket . . . (until) . . . he saw his first bullfight. He was hooked instantly, buying every bullfighting book he could find, including Hemingway's Death in the Afternoon.

When he left school, he joined the hundreds of penniless teenage Spanish boys . . . who hitch-hike around the peninsula carrying a stick and a piece of red flannel cloth . . . in hopes of finding a chance to cape a bull, a cow or a calf on the ranch of a friendly bull breeder.

Henry even followed the dangerous example of the immortal Juan Belmonte by stripping naked one moonlit night and swimming across the Guadalquivir River to cut a bull out of the herd and cape it . . . He risked not only being fatally gored but of being shot or savagely beaten by the guardians of the ranch.

In 1966, he got his first professional fight . . .

But the bullfighting career still did not go well and in 1974 he decided to retire from the ring to earn some money.

Surprisingly he proved a very successful — but bored — businessman. He obtained the Spanish patents for a range of pocket calculators and games and at the time of his death he was very prosperous. Within a year or two he might have been rich.

But Henry suffered from machismo. He loved danger and looked for new risks. First, a 200-m.p.h. motorcycle and then the hang-glider.

Hua's Hegemonism Taunt Angers, Alarms Moscow

By CRAIG WHITNEY
New York Times

MOSCOW — After the visit of China's Premier Hua Kuo-Feng to Eastern Europe, it is clear that the Soviet Union has been irritated and deeply worried by China's re-emergence in the international arena. The Soviets, however, seem at a loss about what to do about it.

HUA

CEAUSESCU

Hua visited Rumania, a Warsaw Pact ally of the Soviet Union, and Yugoslavia, which is unaligned. In both countries, he referred pointedly to the treat of "hegemonism" — Peking's unmistakable code word for Soviet power — and the Soviet press has reacted with angry attacks.

Moscow is clearly as angry at Yugoslavia and Rumania as at the Chinese, for allowing themselves to be used to bolster Peking's prestige. But the Kremlin is apparently having trouble deciding on actions that will speak as loudly as its harsh words.

The Soviets were particularly upset by Rumania's hospitality to Hua. President Nicolae Ceausescu has been pursuing a foreign policy line independent of Moscow, but he has kept aloof from the Sino-Soviet ideological rift. Unlike Yugoslavia's Tito, Ceausescu has repeatedly reaffirmed the importance of close ties to Moscow.

A western diplomat in Moscow has speculated that this time Ceausescu had gone too far, and that the Soviets were now probably looking for a way to "punish" him for the warm welcome given to Hua. Yet it is hard to see what that punishment could be.

For all his disagreements with Soviet Premier Leonid Brezhnev, most recently during his quick visit to Yalta in advance of Hua's visit, Ceausescu has been treated in the official Soviet press as a full member of the Eastern European fold. The solidarity of that shaky empire is hardly something the Soviets can afford to call into question when the Chinese are casting about for ideological and strategic allies.

The reaction here to the treaty of peace and friendship that was signed by Japan and China Aug. 12 was also mostly bluster. The treaty was alleged to be a danger to peace and stability in Asia, yet the Soviet Union said nothing about what it might actually do to retaliate.

Indeed, it is hard to believe the Soviet Union intends to retaliate. During the first six months of this year, while Tokyo was negotiating the treaty in Peking, the Soviet press was full of anti-Japanese articles. At the same time, however, money-making Japanese exports to the Soviet Union also rose to new highs — the latter to nearly $1.2 billion, 10 per cent more than last year.

Izvestia, the official Soviet government paper, did suggest a kind of counterdemand — a treaty of peace and friendship between Japan and the Soviet Union.

The Japanese government, however, has rejected the idea of a treaty until the Soviets return four northern islands that Stalin seized at the Second World War — a request that the Soviets have refused.

There is, however, little doubt here that if China's appeals to Japan and to the West for help in modernizing its economy and armed forces are answered, the Kremlin will find some way to react. The ultimate decision probably depends on what course the United States takes.

If the Carter administration sells the Chinese the technology and hardware it has lately been denying the Soviet Union for political reasons, Soviet insiders say this would force the Kremlin to make an agonizing reappraisal of relations with Washington.

One Soviet commentator with close ties to the leadership recently suggested, in private, that arms sales to the Chinese by the United States or its NATO allies would in effect subvert a strategic arms treaty. A western opening to China could, in the worst possible case, mean the end of Soviet detente policies.

But that point has not been reached yet. For the present, the Soviet leaders are pointing out to the rest of the world — and to their own allies — that the Chinese are preaching the inevitability of war and that the danger from Peking has been vastly underestimated. They also seem to be afraid nobody is listening.

Smallpox Mishap a Warning

Times of London
An Editorial

Smallpox, otherwise long extinct in the whole of Europe, has now appeared twice in five years in Britain, each time in association with a laboratory where the virus is stored and handled. The earlier outbreak, in which two victims died, was followed by a public inquiry similar to the one announced recently. It uncovered shockingly casual practices in a laboratory at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine and made numerous recommendations, of which the principal ones have been put into effect.

A code of practice for those handling dangerous pathogens has been drawn up and published, and a standing committee has been set up to investigate and advise the Department of Health about the standards in laboratories seeking to undertake such work. Yet it seems that this was not enough. The failure is one that should cause all those involved with dangerous organisms, chemicals or radioactive materials to re-examine their safety precautions.

There are about fourteen laboratories in the world where smallpox virus is kept for study. Except in Britain, an escape of infection appears to be an extremely rare occurrence. But as the areas in which the disease is endemic have shrunk, these artificially maintained stocks have increasingly come to represent the greatest remaining source of danger.

Until lately, there had been growing reason to hope that a hospital worker in Somalia, who contracted smallpox last October, might be the last human being who would have to suffer from it. The World Health Organization's (WHO's) ten-year campaign against the disease has been one of the remarkable of all achievements of preventive medicine. As recently as 1974, an epidemic in India caused 22,000 deaths; now smallpox has been virtually eradicated.

In a developed country, a smallpox outbreak, once recognized, is relatively easily brought under control, but only at heavy cost. The 1973 outbreak meant that many business and holiday visits to Britain were cancelled and about four million people had to be vaccinated; the official report said that the financial cost might be measured in millions, quite apart from the sufferings of the victims themselves.

It might seem better to destroy all stocks and so remove the risk altogether. Most disappearing species have claims on our protection if only for sentimental reasons, however destructive their habits, but the smallpox virus is not one of them. It has no important function in general scientific research that cannot be served by other kinds of virus. It is not necessary for the preparation of vaccines against itself.

But there is a possibility that some future epidemic may occur in which there is doubt whether the cause is smallpox from an overlooked source, or a mutation of some allied virus. Some specimens need to be kept for matching in such an eventuality. A handful of centres will be enough to serve this purpose for the entire world. The WHO hopes to have the number down to five in a few years, and the latest accident should hasten progress towards that goal. It should also serve to dispel any premature complacency about man's still inconclusive victory over one of the most virulent of all his enemies on earth.

No Deadline For Release Of Files

TORONTO (CP) — A provincial judge Monday refused to set a deadline for Canada's solicitor-general to decide whether confidential RCMP files under subpoena should be released at a preliminary hearing into charges against The Sun, its editor and its publisher.

The hearing into charges laid under the Official Secrets Act was adjourned by Judge Carl Waisberg until Nov. 21 after the judge said he would see what was produced at that time by Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais "and take it from there."

Judge Waisberg was responding to a request for a deadline from defence lawyer Eddie Goodman, who earlier accused the solicitor-general of abusing and delaying the administration of justice by making no decision in the matter.

Defence lawyers had been granted permission Aug. 2 to subpoena the confidential files, including all reports, documents and memoranda prepared by or for the use of the RCMP on four items contained in an article published by The Sun last March.

Toronto Sun Publishing Ltd., its editor, Peter Worthington, and its publisher, J. D. Creighton, are charged under the act with communication of top secret information and with receiving and possession of that information.

The subpeona also requests information on the rules, orders and regulations which determine how security classifications for documents are reached.

When the hearing resumed Tuesday after being adjourned in August, Goodman said the solicitor-general was distorting and delaying the process of justice by not making a decision on the subpeona.

The subpeona had been addressed to Chief Superintendent Michael Spooner of the RCMP, the Crown's first witness at the hearing, who then asked the solicitor-general for permission to release the confidential information.

Although Goodman argued that the judge should set two deadlines — one for the decision to be made available to counsel and the other for resumption of the hearing — Judge Waisberg said he would set only one date, Nov. 21.

"I'm not going to make any date mandatory," the judge told Goodman.

Crown prosecutor John Scollin told the court that the government, in particular the solicitor-general, had not completed a review of more than 100 files and 17,000 documents covered by the subpoena.

The solicitor-general must review each document for national security reasons, he said, adding that he expected the job would take several months.

Goodman said it was his submission that "the dilatory conduct and continuing procrastination of the solicitor-general is an abuse of the whole process of this court and the administration of justice in the province and country."

He said that while the review of the documents was important and a considerable task, it should not take close to four months to complete.

Goodman, who already has reviewed the major files, made it clear that he was referring to the solicitor-general and not Scollin when speaking of the Crown's delays.

He said the solicitor-general, who was not mentioned by name throughout the proceedings, does not seem to think the accused are entitled to an expeditious trial.

"In my view, the minister does not want to make a decision which is essential for the proper defence and prosecution of this case," Goodman said.

Although Judge Waisberg said there was some basis for Goodman's comments because the matter should be duly dispatched, he said it was the first time the matter of delay had come up and that "it's perhaps a bit premature."

Scollin said it would take two months for the solicitor-general to complete the review and suggested the hearing resume in early December.

MONTREAL GROCERY STORES SELL WINE

MONTREAL (CP) — Thirty varieties of wine produced in Quebec or bottled by the Quebec liquor board went on sale at Montreal grocery stores Monday, and they will be sold at 9,300 stores throughout the province by Nov. 9.

The first customer was Quebec Industry Minister Rodrigue Tremblay who picked up several bottles at a grocery in his riding of Gouin to inaugurate the new service. Prices for the wines vary from $2.05 to $5.05.

At a news conference later, Tremblay said the government's decision to sell the wine through corner stores — rather than maintain the previous monopoly of government liquor stores — would have "a number of economic advantages ... and is a most natural way to stimulate the Quebec economy."

He said the Quebec liquor board is expected to gain additional annual revenue of $50 million because of the grocery store sales.

There is no question of selling hard liquor in grocery stores, the minister said, since that would risk a return "to the abuses of the 1920s."

The liquor board says the sale of wines produced in Quebec should encourage the industry by adding sales of 595,000 gallons to current annual sales of 1.5 million gallons.

The selection in the grocery stores includes 20 wines produced by 10 Quebec companies and 10 imported wines bottled by the liquor board. As well, 10 cider brands approved by the liquor board are being sold.

Criticism of 2,4-D 'Idiotic'

WINNIPEG (CP) — A leading cereal scientist says a little starvation applied before decisions are taken to ban insecticides and herbicides would markedly help the cause of food production to feed a hungry world.

Dr. R. G Anderson of Mexico City, an Ontario native who now heads an international centre for the improvement of corn and wheat, said Monday food costs will skyrocket if the current trend in chemical bans is continued.

"Herbicides and insecticides are widely accused of destroying the environment," Dr. Anderson told the International Cereal and Bread Congress.

"Criticism of this type may sometimes be justified, but as a blanket statement it is idiotic in the extreme."

He said it appears the urban majority, and particularly the law profession, has been the arbiter of such decisions affecting the food chain.

Dr. Anderson said that unfortunately the decisions made in developed countries regarding herbicides and insecticides also are taken up by the developing countries where food is scarce.

He said the most recent scares involving 2, 4-D and 2, 4, 5T and sodium nitrites have not been proven scientifically.

"How far can we afford to explore such pseudo-scientiific approaches? Can we eat anything anymore?"

He said the continued existence of man is at stake in the population-food equation.

"We are faced with the tasks of increasing food production in the next 3½ decades in an amount equal to that which was accomplished in the previous 996 decades which have elapsed since the inception of agriculture."

He said the challenge can be met with the will and much greater effort to develop improved agronomic techniques, including use of chemicals, and higher-yielding varieties of grain.

With full utilization of land and water resources in conjunction with proper techniques, food supplies can be ensured for the next doubling of the population.

But the population problem also must be stemmed, he said.

"Ultimately it is said, education, good health and adequate incomes are the real answers to small families, I submit that there is not time for this to occur and that coercive force is more likely to be needed in spite of our abhorrence of the curtailment of individual human rights.

"The problem is one of man's survival and the welfare of the whole race is paramount."

DEFENCE DEP'T SUED

OTTAWA (CP) — A former Canadian Forces captain, convicted four years ago of possession of marijuana, has filed a wrongful dismissal suit against the defence department.

John Campbell 33, is seeking reinstatement to the forces, full seniority, full pay and allowances from his release to reinstatement and costs of the legal action. As an alternative, he is asking damages for wrongful dismissal.

The action has been filed in the Federal Court of Canada but a spokesman for the defence department said Monday the department has not yet received it.

Campbell, an instructor at the Canadian Forces school of communications and electronic engineering in Kingston, Ont., was fined $500 and reprimanded on the marijuana charge four years ago.

Campbell was dismissed and he now alleges his release "was wrongful, arbitrary and without any or sufficient cause."

Oil, Gas Search Stepped Up in '77

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — The Canadian petroleum industry experienced a dynamic period of oil and natural gas exploration in 1977 and several oil and gas discoveries might significantly add to Canada's proven reserves, Alastair Gillespie, federal energy minister, said.

In releasing a report to the World Energy Conference, he said increased cash flows, largely a result of domestic well-head price increases, were accompanied by increased expenditures.

The report, prepared for the energy department, says internal cash generation by the industry increased to $3.8 billion last year from $3.1 billion in 1976.

Proof of Change Needed Before Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — Federalist forces could lose the promised referendum on Quebec independence unless the constitution is changed, Marc Lalonde, federal-provincial relations minister, said Monday.

"If Canadian unity is to be consolidated, Quebecers must have concrete and irrefutable proof that our constitution really can be renewed, that its renewal has already begun and that the constitution can subsequently be amended at any time in response to the aspirations of all Canadians," Lalonde said in a speech prepared for a Montreal businessmen's organization.

"On the day the people of Quebec go to the polls to express their views on the destiny of the province and thereby on the future of Canada as a whole, it is essential that they have the opportunity to make a conscious choice.

"If, against the Parti Quebecois' separatist option, we counter only with the status quo, we may well regret it the evening of the referendum.

To prove to Quebecers that change can occur, the federal government introduced proposed constitutional changes in June. The changes are currently being studied by a joint Senate-Commons committee.

Among the changes are abolition of the Senate, in favor of a House of the Federation to represent the provinces, greater provincial voice in Supreme Court of Canada appointments and a charter of human rights, with an emphasis on language equality.

$90,000 AWARD

TORONTO (CP) — Twenty-four children orphaned or left with only one parent following a car accident in July, 1970, were awarded a total of $90,000 Monday in Ontario Supreme Court.

The insurers of a car that was driven between an Ontario Provincial Police cruiser and another car on a county road near Brantford, Ont., killing five persons, were ordered to pay $50,000.

The insurers of the police cruiser were ordered to pay $40,000.

Mr. Justice Edson Haines was told the cruiser stopped beside a parked car and that police were questioning the occupants, all from the nearby Six Nations reserve, when a third car, driven by Ralph Powless, also of the reserve, drove through at high speed.

The largest award was $6,000 to one child, the lowest $250 to the eldest.

Talks With U.K. On Referendums

LONDON (Reuter) — A four-man Canadian delegation held talks with British government officials Monday on the British experience in holding referendums.

Louis Desmarais, a prominent Montreal businessman, said the delegation wants as much detailed information as possible in preparation for a possible referendum on Quebec independence.

Desmarais heads a national organization called the Council of Canadian Unity, representing some of Canada's most influential business corporations.

"We are here because we are concerned at the danger of Canada splitting apart if Quebec decides to become independent," Desmarais said.

He said his pro-federalist group is particularly interested in the part played by British businessmen in Britain's June, 1975, referendum, which showed that 67.2 per cent in Britain wanted the country to remain in the European Common Market, compared with 32.8 per cent against.

The four-engined Hercules plane, carrying a total of 13 passengers, crashed as it came into land at Doshan Tappah air base to pick up relief supplies and food for earthquake victims.

Meanwhile, hundreds of maimed men, women and children still lay in field hospitals in Tabas and nearby towns An air force source said it was planned to take all the seriously wounded to Tehran eventually because of Tabas' lack of medical facilities.

There were chaotic scenes in Tabas, as overworked doctors and nurses tried to cope with a dozen different cases at a time.

Plasma bottles dangled from trees above the makeshift beds of the injured. Bandaging of cuts and broken limbs was conducted under bright sun. Many people were reported in critical condition as the medical staff fought a losing battle against time.

Empress Farah Pahlavi, who flew to Tabas Monday, was mobbed by survivors who demanded more relief aid and sought her assistance in the recovery of bodies.

Colorful toys and women's dresses and sparkling pieces of bright blue tile or broken window glass gleamed amid the black and gray mass of bricks, broken arches and caved-in earthen huts.

Cinemas, sports stadiums, grocery and medical stores, photo studios, mosques, schools, restaurants and banks lay in heaps of rubble. A local branch of the Bank Farhangian, a private bank, was among the very few buildings that stood.

"Where is the army? Why doesn't someone help me?" an old man said as he wandered through the ruins in the Tabas square searching for bodies of his family. Only one of the 10 had been found.

Postal Strike Threat Worries Retailers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fears that a prolonged postal strike will hurt British Columbia's small retailers were expressed Monday by the B.C. division of the Retail Merchants Association in a telegram to Trade Minister Jack Horner, urging government intervention to avert strike action.

Big retailers can find ways around the strike, but small businessmen operating on slim profit margins cannot afford long-distance calls, telegrams and courier services to place orders and receive shipments, said Joan Wallace, general manager for the association in B.C.

All retailers will suffer from the cash flow squeeze, she said.

"As cheques from credit customers dry up, the retailer will be forced to borrow from his bank to meet his payments to suppliers, increasing the cost of doing business."

She said a strike could reverse the slight upward trend in retail sales that has taken place since the provincial sales tax was reduced last spring.

Retails in the Interior and Vancouver Island would be hardest hit, she said.

UVic Law Building Plans Approved

The provincial government has approved plans for a new University of Victoria law building.

UVic board of governors was informed Monday it can proceed with working drawings for the $6 million school.

The building will allow the school to expand, said law dean Murray Fraser.

Now housed in cramped quarters in the McPherson Library on campus, the school is limited to 70 students.

In the new building, it could expand to take 100 new students a year, Fraser said.

Working drawings should be completed this winter and if the university receives government approval to call bids immediately, the building could be ready for classes in the fall of 1980.

Davis Fined

The judge said such a breach could not be dealt with except as a serious matter — more serious than a similar crime committed by an ordinary citizen.

Hood told the court that the former cabinet minister's public service should be a strong mitigating factor when it came to determining sentence.

In obtaining and keeping refunds from downgrading tickets Davis's only intent was to save the government money and to provide time for himself to work while travelling for the government, the lawyer said.

The refunds stemmed from a desire to travel economy, he said, where Davis could work without interruption, instead of being subjected to the more convivial atmosphere of first-class.

DISTRICT OF NORTH SAANICH

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

NOTICE is hereby given that the District of North Saanich will be making application to the Lieutenant Governor-in-Council under Section 8 (12) and (13) of the Agriculture Land Commission Act and Section 40 of B.C. Regulations 313/78 to have the following properties included in the designated Agriculture Land Reserve;

(1) Lot A, Section 7, Range 3 East, Plan 16762, North Saanich Land District;
(2) That part of Section 7, Range 3 East, lying south of a line drawn easterly at right angles to the west boundary of said section from a point on said boundary distant 10 chains from the southwest corner of said section except those parts of the former rights-of-way of the Canadian Northern Pacific Railway registered in the name of His Majesty the King in right of the Province of British Columbia, under number 103302-I and 103308-I and except those parts thereof included within the boundaries of Plans 11093, 13429 and 16762, North Saanich Land District.

These lands lie east of Canora Road abutting the southern boundary of the Town of Sidney.

Persons who deem themselves affected by such an application will be afforded an opportunity to be heard before the Municipal Council at a Public Hearing to be held in the Royal Canadian Legion, Branch No. 37 Hall 1660 Mills Road on Wednesday, September 27th, 1978 commencing at 7:30 p.m.

This Man Conquered Cape Horn

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Capt. John Wilson is a master mariner of steam and sail who belongs to the most exclusive marine organization in the world — the Cape Horn Club.

To belong, one has to round Cape Horn in a sailing vessel, be recognized for the feat and be awarded the International Association of Cape Horners of St. Malo's Albatross medal.

The 62-year-old Wilson, who is visiting Victoria, returned to his native Norway six years ago after an absence of 30 years, having roamed the oceans of the world since he set to sea as a 14-year-old cabin boy.

He received his first command in 1949 but Wilson, a "self-taught sailor" considers his last one — the three masted cutter barquentine Regina Maris — the best one of all.

He was master of the 145-foot sailing cargo ship for seven years. During that time he carried out two 15-month voyages and experienced a dismasting during a tornado.

In 1966 and 1967 he sailed her from Norway around Cape Horn and back to Norway again, winning the Albatross medal for his exploit.

In a later 15-month voyage the Regina Maris sailed from Norway around the Cape of Good Hope to Australia.

Two years after receiving the Albatross medal the International Association of Cape Horners of St. Malo honored him again — this time for his promotion of the Cape Horners Club.

The dismasting in September, 1969, came three weeks after his wife Tsui-Yuk (Alice), whom he met in Hong Kong, gave birth to their daughter Marianne.

The Regina Maris was off the Cape Verde Islands, south of the Canary Islands, when the tornado struck. All that were left of the main and mizzen spars were two jagged stumps while the foremast was sheared off right on top of the deckhouse.

Wilson had his wife and daughter aboard at the time and when finally, he went below to change into some warm clothes, he found his wife nursing their daughter.

"I told her we had lost everything, all the rigging is gone," he recalls.

The Regina Maris was towed back to Norway and rerigged with even taller masts and more sail area. The dowager oak vessel, built in 1908, was ready for sea again.

He says it had always been an ambition of his to have one of his children married on the high seas.

It was shortly after Malta had been given its independence by Britain and he managed to persuade Maltese officials to pass legislation, making it lawful under Maltese law to be married on the high seas.

Later, he was to receive an official letter from Malta telling him he "should be proud to make history in Malta."

Wilson's crew aboard the Regina Maris — mostly schoolboys — ranged in numbers from 12 to 16 and came from a variety of countries including Norway, Britain, Germany, Portugal, Spain, the Canary Islands, the United States, Mexico, Argentina, Peru, Chile, Uruguay, France, Curacao and other places.

Wilson, who speaks Norwegian, English, Spanish and German, says his crews always had a sufficient smattering of Emglish to get by.

While in Victoria Wilson received two more honors. He was made a member of the B.C. Maritime Museum and the Thermopylae Club.

Wilson says there have been seafaring folk in his family as far as church records go back — the 16th century — and probably before that.

Gov't Union Preparing For Battle

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

B.C.'s public service employees are gearing for a tough battle with the government next year and giving advance warning that the public could be caught up in the fracas.

John Fryer, general secretary of the 43,000-member B.C. Government Employees Union, said in an interview Monday he feels the government will try to make an example of his members in urging restraint on other employers.

"The government is going to say 'we are going to be tough with our employees and we expect you to be too,' " he said.

Coupled with this attitude, he added, is the morale of the public service employees which the union feels is at an all-time low.

"There are hundreds of brush fires smouldering out there and you can't contain them if you don't deal fairly with people," Fryer said.

He said the B.C. government will be goaded in its contract negotiations with its employees by a mood across Canada which seems to be saying it is open season on the public service.

"We are bound to be caught up in all that."

The master agreement for 37,000 government employees expires July 31, 1979. Most of the other 6,000 union members' contracts expire at different dates throughout the year.

Fryer said in the summer of 1977 the union came within eight hours of a strike and at that time threatened to shut down the government liquor stores.

This time, he said, the union has other tricks up its sleeve which might inconvenience the elite more than ordinary citizens.

He said the union might shut down medical services plan offices and prevent any cheques being mailed out to doctors.

Fryer said wages likely won't be the top priority when negotiations begin, probably in June.

He said the union will focus on the contracting out of work, occupational health and safety and benefits for retired members.

More Hazards Face Posting

More Victoria hotels and apartments will soon be posted with fire hazard notices, Fire Chief Eric Simmons said today.

Simmons refused to identify the buildings but said they are among 12 apartments and seven hotels his inspectors have found deficient in fire safety features.

On Monday Victoria fire inspector Ray Best and the city's chief building inspector Ron Walker met Empress manager Ted Balderson and CP Hotel's senior engineer Ed Steele to discuss the problems.

Steele refused to comment on the outcome of the talks which lasted more than two hours and Balderson was unavailable for comment.

The notices list several deficiencies in the 65-year-old hotel including an obsolete fire alarm system, a lack of smoke and heat detectors, and inadequate fire doors and room doors.

The cost of upgrading the building would run into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Simmons said the hotel has 60 days to either file an appeal or get the work done.

Even if work is started the notices will remain in place until all fire safety standards are met, he said.

Simmons said if nothing is done he is required by bylaw to take the matter up with city council.

UIC Dumping 200 a Month in City

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Local unemployment insurance payments have been cut by $500,000 since May, due in part to a spot check system that weeds out those not entitled to benefits, Victoria Canada Employment Centre manager Stan Purdy said today.

"We are catching as many as 200 a month," he said.

This summer, letters have gone out to 600 UIC cheque recipients per month, inviting them to a counselling session on local job opportunities.

"Anyone not showing up is automatically disqualified from further UIC benefits because they are not available for work."

Some weeks this disqualification total runs as high as 32 per cent, he said.

Purdy said people fail to show up for one of three reasons: they know they are not actively seeking work, they have a job offer somewhere but they had been waiting for their benefits to run out before accepting it or they are out of town.

Purdy said those out of town often are on holidays in California or Hawaii and are not eligible for UIC because they are not actively looking for work.

The irony is they could remain eligible by checking in with the Canada Employment Centre before leaving Victoria.

Someone going for a three-week holiday would have his benefits halted for that three-week period but could resume his benefits when he returns.

However, someone leaving town without informing the Canada Employment Centre is automatically disqualified from further benefits.

Purdy said spot checks had been carried out on a piecemeal basis in the past but now they are a regular feature of the local Manpower-UIC operation.

Another 600 people are being invited to a UIC counselling session this month and those not showing up will be disqualified.

Partly as a result of this program, the UIC payout in the Victoria area in August totalled $3 million, down $500,000 from $3.5 million in May.

Improving economic conditions was another factor in the decline.

The Victoria unemployment rate, in real terms, was 7.1 per cent in August, down from 9.5 per cent the previous August. The improvement was due mainly to strength in tourism and the forest products industry.

There were 7,824 looking for work in August, down from 10,549 at the same time one year ago.

The Canada Employment Centre found jobs for 841 people during August. A total of 944 job opportunities came into the centre during the month.

There were 7,072 new claims for UIC benefits in the Victoria area during August, down from 7,463 at the same time last year.

Purdy said the main purpose of the spot checks is to help Victorians find suitable jobs. Weeding out those not entitled to UIC benefits is a side effect.

The spot check program has become a regular feature now that Manpower has merged with UIC at the Canada Employment Centre, 810 Fort.

Purdy said information services are also being expanded.

"We soon will be installing an audio-visual device that will answer the most common questions about unemployment insurance."

The machine will run continuously near the reception area of the building. In a three-and-a-quarter minute presentation it will explain how to become eligible for benefits and what the waiting period is.

"I was exasperated in looking over our pamphlets because of all the jargon. None of the pamphlets explained what everyone wanted to know: when do I get my cheque?"

Purdy said the pamphlets talk about a two-week waiting period but it is four weeks before the first cheque arrives. This is not explained in any of the pamphlets, he said, but will be spelled out clearly in the audio-visual display.

Purdy said about 10,000 people in the Victoria area are collecting UIC benefits and he expected the total to stay fairly level during the winter.

Unemployment would increase, he said, but not all would be eligible for UIC benefits.

Taxi Driver Robbed

A police spokesman said Dale Eugene Friend, 27, of Victoria Taxi, was driving in the 1500-block Pandora about 2 a.m. when he was pulled to the curb by two men in another car.

VIPs . . . Very In-Persons

Lt.- Gov. Henry Bell-Irving danced in a conga line on the stage at Memorial Arena Friday night.

He was among 3,000 attending an Up With People song-and-dance show.

During a medley of international songs, cast members went into the audience to get volunteers for a conga line and the lieutenant-governor went up on stage to join in.

He had met the young performers at a reception at Government House earlier in the week.

Also among the spontaneous performers was University of Victoria president Howard Petch. As a member of the audience he sang a chorus into a microphone when cast members went hunting for volunteers.

The University of Victoria is getting into the record business.

One album of classical music has already been recorded at UVic's acoustic marvel, the University Centre, and there may be more to come says Ethan Sloane, clarinetist and music department professor.

The album was made for Crystal Records of Los Angeles, a small connoisseur label specializing in obscure and rare works.

UVic's music department wants to work out a contract with Crystal or some other small label to produce a minimum of four recordings a year at the auditorium.

He's still being a bit coy in his intentions but he'll talk your head off about the poor way things are being done in the municipality and is sounding more and more like a man who's seriously contemplating getting back into the political arena.

★ ★ ★

Procrastination pays off or pong with the wind.

It was Bunn, nostrils flaring slightly at the prospect of paying out about $400 in taxpayer cash, who prevailed when other members of council considered trucking away stinky seaweed off Willows Beach.

Rather than have this done, said Bunn, why not wait a while and see what might happen ?

Monday night, aldermen learned that nature in her own wondrous way (wind and tide actually) had taken care of the situation.

Grads' Chance Better But Competition Fierce

A post secondary education doesn't guarantee a higher paying job anymore, but university graduates have a greater chance of finding work than less educated young adults, according to the latest Statistics Canada survey.

In a 400-page book titled Out of School — Into the Labor Force, StatsCan says recent university graduates heading into the work force find the competition fierce.

More than one-third of all young peope entering the labor force now have degrees or some kind of post-secondary training.

The most startling impact of the over-supply of university grads is revealed in wage trends of the last 10 years.

In 1968, starting salaries for university graduates were 18 per cent higher than the average industrial wage, now they are 12 below it.

But the well-educated young adults have a much better chance of finding work.

Spring unemployment for 15 to 24-year-olds averaged 23.2 per cent for those with an elementary education, but only 5.4 per cent for degree holders.

TOWN TALK

Who says those Toronto-based magazines that purport to cover the news across the country don't have a clue about what's happening beyond the Rockies.?

That's just B.C. paranoia, right?

Well, Saturday's issue of Weekend Magazine, published in Toronto and carried as a supplement to the Victoria Times, contained an article on Rhodes scholars with an accompanying list of 25 winners who have attained prominent positions.

Davis was fired from his cabinet post April 3 — 5½ months ago — when it was learned RCMP were investigating his handling of airline tickets.

And just for the record, nobody from the Socred government showed up in Vancouver county court Monday when Davis was sentenced.

Surplus Gas For Canada

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Ottawa would prefer to see surplus Alberta natural gas sold to Quebec and the Maritimes, rather than being exported to the U.S. on a short-term basis, Alastair Gillespie, federal energy minister, said Monday.

In an address to 250 delegates attending the World Energy Conference, he said the federal government hoped the surplus gas might be used to end Canada's reliance on foreign oil.

Canada imports about 630,000 barrels daily and this could grow to an estimated 800,000 barrels by 1985, Gillespie said.

Alberta gas is used in parts of Ontario and Montreal. TransCanada PipeLines Ltd. facilities end at Montreal, forcing the Maritimes to rely almost exclusively on imported oil.

Q and M Pipe Lines Ltd. of Calgary has proposed to build pipelines to the Atlantic provinces. Q and M is a joint venture of Petro-Canada and Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd., a sponsor of the Alaska Highway pipeline project.

At a news conference later, Gillespie said the National Energy Board will hold gas hearings in October to gauge Canada's supply-and-demand position for the next 25 years and to determine if an exportable gas surplus exists.

The Canadian petroleum industry, which has had no new export permits since 1971, has urged Ottawa to allow short-term exports to the U.S.

NORTH SASK. DAM VETOED

REGINA (CP) — Reports from two boards of inquiry into three Saskatchewan power projects offer no promise there will be an end to international controversy over trans-border pollution, Premier Allan Blakeney said Monday.

The inquiries rejected a new hydroelectric dam for the Churchill River in northern Saskatchewan, gave qualified approval for a new dam at Nipawin, Sask., and approved adding a second generating unit to the Poplar River thermal power plant at Coronach, just north of the Saskatchewan-Montana border. One inquiry board considered both the Poplar River and Nipawin proposals.

It will be up to the provincial cabinet to finally decide what projects go ahead and when, but the Saskatchewan Power Corp. has made no secret of its preference for anther generating unit at Coronach. Environment Minister Neil Byers said Monday the government was authorizing construction of both, subject to the conditions laid down by the inquiry report.

The second Coronach unit is estimated to cost $171 million and the Nipawin dam $240 million.

New standards for air pollution in the U.S. limit the quantity of emissions in any given area.

LOFTY SUNFLOWER which has reached a height of 18 feet (about 5 metres) was grown outside the Toronto apartment of Alfred Moreira without the aid of fertilizers, according to residents. Normally, sunflowers grow to a height of about 10 feet.

Rail Stations To Stay

OTTAWA (CP) — VIA Rail, the Crown corporation operating rail passenger services, will oppose any further relocations of railway stations from downtown areas the corporation president, J. F. Roberts, said Monday.

"A downtown location is one of rail's major advantages, an asset which will become increasingly important," he told the annual conference of the Roads and Transportation Association.

Rather than move downtown stations, they could become transportation centres where the traveller can move easily between intercity trains, intercity buses and where there are convenient airport connections, said Roberts.

That was an example of co-operation needed in the public transportation business that will be required if Canadians are to lose their reliance on the private automobile, he added.

Roberts said this country, along with the U.S. will not have enough petroleum products available in the mid-1980s to permit the same use of the private car.

Little consideration had been given to this situation, but now with the price of gas reaching $1 a gallon, "it's time we did some serious thinking about the kind of transportation system we'll need in 10 or 15 years."

Roberts said nearly 90 per cent of all intercity trips in Canada are made by private car. For trips of under 500 miles the percentage was more than 90 per cent.

An integrated system of public transportation using the best of all modes was needed to convince car owners to leave their vehicles for some intercity trips.

He said rail could provide effective service between 100 and 500 miles. "Within this range, modern trains can provide fast, efficient service."

For distances of less than 250 miles or where traffic volume was light, the advantages of buses was apparent.

Limit on Postal Strikes

HALIFAX (CP) — Delegates to the annual convention of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce endorsed a proposal Monday calling on the federal government to limit the right of Canada's postal workers to strike.

The resolution by the Ottawa delegation, approved unanimously, said the right of workers to strike and of management to lock out employees could be limited by imposing arbitration or a participant's penalty, presumably a fine.

It said the quality of service from the post office has deteriorated because of work stoppages, and business was suffering because of the service's "monopolistic position."

Ellen Fairclough of Hamilton, Canada's postmaster-general in the Progressive Conservative government of John Diefenbaker in the early 1960s, urged delegates to support the proposals, saying an efficient postal service was "the right of every individual in Canada."

Copters Foil Pickets

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Helicopters were used to fly non-union personnel into Inco Metals Co. operations Monday after personnel were prevented from entering the company by picket lines, a company spokesman said Monday.

About 11,700 Inco workers, members of the United Steelworkers of America, went on strike Friday after rejecting the company's latest contract offer. Scores of staff members have been sleeping on worksites for more than a week in anticipation of a walkout, the Inco spokesman said.

Meanwhile, 750 workers, members of Local 6200 in Port Colborne, south of Welland, were continuing to work after accepting the company's offer in a vote Saturday.

In morning policy sessions Monday, the convention narrowly rejected two separate proposals to abolish Canada's capital gains tax, an issue that was hotly debated before losing on two close votes that supported abolition but failed to attain the required two-thirds majority support.

A company spokesman said Port Colborne also obtains nickel from the company's Thompson, Man., mine and that the plant can function for at least three months, despite the shutdown in Sudbury. If the refinery runs out of material, workers will be laid off and will be eligible for unemployment insurance benefits, he said.

Before The Judge

A preliminary hearing date on a charge of unlawful confinement against an Esquimalt constable was set Monday in provincial court for Feb. 21.

James Askew, 38, who was committed to stand trial on a charge of assault causing bodily harm to 33-year-old Ronald Shingler, 613 Drake, on Dec. 19, 1976, was also charged with the unlawful confinement of Shingler.

Judge Fred Green ordered the committal Friday on the assault charge but there was no time to hear evidence on the second count.

Askew has elected trial by judge without jury.

A third teen-ager was charged Monday in a Sept. 8 incident in which an Esquimalt constable allegedly received broken ribs while investigating a complaint in front of 831 Ellery.

Randy Ireland, 17, of 662 Head, was charged with assault causing bodily harm to Sgt. Frank Mitchell and Constable Gordon Jenkins and with obstructing the peace officers in their duties.

Ireland, who will be represented by lawyer David Lisson, elcted trial by judge and jury and was remanded until Thursday to set a preliminary hearing date.

Charged last Tuesday with an assault against Mitchell and obstruction were 17-year-old Stephen Roy Khol, 1825 Fairfield, and 18-year-old Kevan Craven, 1167 Colville. Khol was also charged with assaulting Jenkins while Craven was charged additionally with escaping lawful custody.

Both were remanded until Thursday, Khol in custody for election and possible bail hearing and Craven, who elected trial by judge without jury, for fixing a preliminary hearing date.

Olympic Hotel Ltd., operators of the Royal Olympic Hotel, 642 Johnson, pleaded guilty to allowing more persons on the premises of Oly's Disco than allowed under the Public Hall and Theatre Safety Regulations.

Crown counsel Richard Law told the court there were 75 more than the allowable 140 people in the disco between 11:25 and 11:40 p.m., Aug. 18.

A charge of permitting people to stand and wait in the entrance passageway was withdrawn after the guilty plea to the first charge was entered.

Orginally charged with the limited company were William Wellburn, John Perri and Al Sproule, principal owners of the hotel.

The charge stated that Brown and another person, on Feb. 5, 1975, tried to make it appear that the cash receipts of the Craigflower Villa apartment block had been taken in a robbery.

Brown was released on his own recognizance in the sum of $2,500 and remanded until Oct. 2 for election of his trial method.

Fined for drinking-driving were: John Joseph Watren, 23, of the USS Rorke, $500; and Albert Barry Batsch, 20, of 645 Pine, $500.

Brotherly Binge Treated Leniently

Two brothers on a binge who broke into the liquor stores of Gorge Vale Golf Club were placed on three years' probation when sentence was suspended Monday in county court.

Charles W. Karaim, 26, and Samuel T. Karaim, 24, pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and theft at the clubhouse, 1005 Craigflower, July 9, 1977, where a cash box was rifled and 34 bottles of liquor taken.

During the burglary a silent alarm was set off and police arrived in time to find the pair still inside the building. Police said $163 was taken from the box and valued the liquor at $250.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett told Judge E.J.C. Stewart the two had numerous convictions for Criminal Code and motor-vehicle offences, and Samuel had been convicted for being in possession of marijuana. He suggested severe penalties.

"I don't think extensive records should necessarily be a decisive factor," Stewart said, noting both young men had support from their family that may help in their rehabilitation.

JUDGE SCOLDS WOMEN JURORS

Two women who failed to show up for jury duty in county court Monday morning were summoned before Judge Leslie Cashman first thing in the afternoon for a dressing down.

When they failed to answer their names at roll call after being issued with a summons, Cashman instructed sheriff's deputies to bring them in.

One of them said there was "no good reason" for not being there — she was simply late. But the second said, "I didn't think I'd have to come."

She said she had appeared at the first day of the current sitting and was not picked for the first jury panel, so assumed the court was finished with her.

"You weren't listening, madam," Cashman said. "That's not a very good excuse.

"There are procedures for disciplining jurors who don't appear . . . I have never done it and I hope it will not be necessary," he said, dismissing the pair.

She Waited 68 Days To Appear

After spending 68 days in custody awaiting disposition of her case, Kathryn Eileen Piercy, 23, was put on probation for 18 months when sentence was suspended Monday in Victoria county court.

The woman pleaded guilty to unlawfully using a credit card knowing it to have been stolen, and appeared before Judge Leslie Cashman following a pre-sentence report.

"You are going to have to change your way of thinking, and particularly with respect to your companions," Cashman said, offering to give the accused a chance "to see what you can do."

As conditions of probation, Piercy must report to a probation officer monthly, seek employment and refrain from association with anyone known to be involved with narcotics or restricted drugs.

"You've got to do something about keeping away from the bad companions you seem to have a predeliction for being involved with," the judge said.

Man Charged In Murder

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shinda Singh Dhaliwal, 26, of Richmond, has been charged with second-degree murder in the death of Honore Larivierre, 52, whose body was found in a vacant Powell Street rooming house Sept. 6.

Police Procedure Unfair - Judge

A man accused of robbing new-found acquaintances after socializing over some beer was acquitted Monday in Victoria county court after the judge said police procedure was unfair to him.

Thomas Cornell Cheek, a black, had pleaded not guilty to theft of about $300 belonging to Carol Bone and Gordon Schaurete and being in possession of money knowing it to have been stolen. The charges arose from an incident last Oct. 31 at the complainants' home at 1473 Hillside.

Defence counsel David Lisson called no evidence and said the Crown's case lacked corroborative evidence of identity and theft could not therefore be proven.

"There is no reason or excuse why this man was not afforded the same opportunity given to white people in this community," Lisson said.

He made the point that there was no lineup or photo comparison, and the police explanation that no suitable black men could be rounded up at that hour of the night, and that police files contain few pictures of blacks, was not acceptable.

Judge Stewart said: "In view of the nature of the evidence and the fact that the defence is based on alleged weakness in that evidence (in the matter of identification) I am going into more detail than I usually do."

He went over evidence from the time Schaurete met a black man as he came away from a downtown liquor store after drinking beer and cashing his paycheque that afternoon. The black gave Schaurete a ride home and he was invited in for a late evening beer.

After sitting with Schaurete and Carol Bone for about 1½ hours, the visitor disappeared while the couple was out of the room briefly. A $20 bill was missing from the coffee table and a wallet containing 13 $20 bills and other denominations also were gone.

Police were given a description of the visitor and within an hour a man was arrested at a discotheque. In his wallet were 14 $20 bills.

But police asked Bone, her brother and Schaurete to make an identification at the police station after indicating their suspect was the thief. They were told to observe the accused as he was taken alone through the police foyer where they were sitting.

"The police procedure was entirely wrong and unfair to the accused," Judge Stewart said, even though he noted certain distinctive features of the accused and said the complainants had plenty of opportunity to look at the visitor in their livingroom.

"There seems no doubt the complainants were given the distinct impression the accused was the thief and the money was recovered," the judge said.

The inherent hazards of identity are increased by such methods, and the court concluded there could be no conviction on such evidence.

Here are three easy steps to help you reinvest in new Canada Savings Bonds

1 Locate and identify your bonds

☐ 1969/70 Series (S24) maturing November 1, 1978,
Look for "S24" or "SR" preceding the serial number on the corner of your maturing bonds.

2 Find out the cash value of your bonds

At maturity, every holder of "S24" or "SR" bonds will receive the face value shown on the bond, plus a special cash bonus payment. In addition, depending on the type of bond you own and whether you have been clipping your interest coupons, you may also be entitled to receive interest up to an amount equal to the face value of your bonds. For example, if you own a $1,000 Coupon Bond with all interest coupons attached, you will receive at maturity:

	S24	SR
Face Value	$1,000.00	$1,000.00
Cash Bonus Payment	115.00	177.50
Regular and Compound Interest	1,000.00	1,000.00
TOTAL VALUE	$2,115.00	$2,177.50

If you have any questions about the value of your bonds, just ask the people where you bank or invest after October 1.

3 Special arrangements make it easy to reinvest

After October 1, simply present your "S24" and "SR" Series Canada Savings Bonds to your bank or other authorized redemption agent. All the paper work in connection with the redemption of your bonds will be done for you at that time. Holders of "SR" bonds will receive their funds immediately. For "S24" bonds the transfer of funds will take place automatically on November 1, the maturity date of this Series.

In the same transaction, you can sign up for your new Canada Savings Bonds. And this year there is a dual purchase limit. You may reinvest all proceeds from your maturing bonds, including face value, cash bonus and interest, in the new Series. In addition, you may also buy up to $30,000 of the new Bonds. It's a great way to keep your money working for you!

Act soon

There are more than 900,000 Canadians who own maturing bonds. If you are one of them, go to your bank, investment dealer, trust company or credit union as soon as possible after October 1 and avoid the rush!

New Canada Savings Bonds offer you a great choice

New Canada Savings Bonds are dated November 1, 1978 and yield an average annual interest of 8.90% when held to maturity in 1985. Each new bond earns interest of 8.50% the first year and 9% for each of the remaining 6 years.

And you have a choice of bonds. There's a Regular Interest Bond that pays interest each year by cheque or, if you prefer, by direct deposit into your chequing or savings account. And a Compound Interest Bond that reinvests your interest automatically after the first year at the guaranteed annual rate of 8.90%.

Whichever type of bond you choose, you will own a safe, secure investment which can be turned into instant cash whenever you need it. Buying Canada Savings Bonds has been a great Canadian tradition for over 30 years. They're the proven choice.

COURT RULING HITS FREE-AGENT ISSUE

PERPETUAL RESTRICTION, SAYS JUDGE

McCourt Can Stay With Red Wings

By The Canadian Press

"The ruling brings the National Hockey League back into the 20th century," commented lawyer Brian Smith after a U.S. federal judge ruled in Detroit on Monday that Dale McCourt does not have to join Los Angeles Kings as compensation for Detroit Red Wings' signing free agent Rogatien Vachon.

"The NHL will have to get its house in order," Smith, McCourt's lawyer, said after the ruling. "The league will have to re-evaluate its position on the use of arbitration to settle the free-agent issue."

McCourt, 21, who enjoyed a sensational rookie season in Detroit last year, filed a lawsuit after an arbitor made him the compensation to the Kings for their loss of Vachon.

The compensation rule imposes a "perpetual restriction on a player's inherent right to freely contract for his services," Judge Robert DeMascio said in his ruling on Monday.

Although the judge ruled only on McCourt's request for a temporary restraining order, Smith insisted the decision would affect all league free agents.

"This will apply to all hockey players," he said. "This is a landmark decision.

The judge cited a suit filed by former Baltimore Colt player John Mackey against the National Football League, which resulted in a court ruling against the NFL's so-called Rozelle Rule. That rule imposed similar penalties on teams which signed free agents.

Like the Rozelle rule, DeMascio said the NHL's compensation rule, Rule 9A "applies to all playerq without regard to their status or ability."

It "unreasonably restrains trade and commerce" in violation of a provision of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, DeMascio said.

"There is to much uncertainty in the compensation rule," Smith said. "How can any general manager deal in good faith with an athlete? A specific formula must be laid out. There's simply too much uncertainty now. Would you give a car dealer $8,000 for a car you never saw?"

In a five-count complaint, McCourt charged that the Kings, the Wings and the NHL Players' Association violated anti-trust laws, restraint of trade, restraint of employment, breached his contract with Detroit and abused arbitration procedures in agreeing to the compensation provisions of the NHL.

The compensation rule, DeMascio said, is "not necessary to maintain competitive balance in the National Hockey League" and it "cannot be justified by any legitimate business purpose."

Larry Rouch, lawyer for Vachon, said during a hearing last week that compensation agreements kept hockey clubs from bidding on players.

"Vancouver said they were afraid of what they would lose in arbitration," Rouch said of the reason Vachon was not signed by the Canucks.

"The New York Rangers were extremely worried over what they might lose," he said.

In Montreal, NHL executive vice-president Brian O'Neill said the league has notified its clubs of the ruling. "We have asked them not to make any comment until we make a complete study of the decision."

However, Jake Milford, general manager of Vancouver voiced his displeasure with the ruling.

"The decision today will have an adverse affect on all NHL teams," he said. "It's a great thing for the players, but will hurt hockey, especially the poorer teams.

"It will put a lot of clubs in an awful financial situation. What's to stop a rich team like New York (Rangers) from taking away your players...there's no compensation involved."

McCourt was naturally pleased with the results.

"My lawyer called me with the verdict," McCourt said from his home near Sudbury, Ont. "I'm just happy, that's all."

"I didn't know what the verdict would be but the judge indicated Friday he would make his decision today (Monday). He realized training camps were starting and I would have to go one place or the other, and both sides agreed with an early decision."

McCourt said he contacted Ted Lindsay, Wings' general manager, later in the day.

"He said he was happy to have me back," McCourt said. "After that all we talked about was my travel arrangements to get to camp.

"I've got nothing bad to say about Los Angeles. It's just that I was so well treated by the coach and the management in Detroit. I wanted to finish out at least the term of my contract."

A date for the hearing on the full lawsuit, which would shake the foundations of professional sports if upheld, was not set.

No Panic: The Lions Are Biding Their Time

The weekend in review, and what a difference a year makes. It was only 12 months ago that quarterback Jerry Tagge of the BC. Lions could do no wrong, the Lions were the surprise of the Canadian Football League, everybody was at least thinking Grey Cup, Tagge was being boosted as player-of-the-year, Vic Rapp as coach-of-the-year and now—now there's been an unfortunate turn of events.

If the Lions aren't dead they will be if they don't get by the Winnipeg Blue Bombers in their next two tests, at Winnipeg on Sunday, and then against the same Blue Bombers, at Empire Stadium, the following Saturday. Tagge has lost his respect and Rapp doesn't know what to do.

But wait. Last Sunday at Calgary, the Lions, even if they didn't get a touchdown, showed promise of a running game. Larry Key is one the most exciting runners in the CFL and newcomer John Henry White showed that he, too, can be a help to the club and can run some. The question marks, of course are the offensive line and Tagge, in whatever order.

Last year, it will be recalled, the Lions lived by the pass and it was the running game that was stalled. This year, it's the other way around. Tagge, for whatever reason, hasn't been hitting his receivers. Until he does, the runners won't be able to carry the load alone.

It's that simple: And when Rapp finds out why Tagge is troubled, the Lions will recover, they will charge into the playoffs. Empire Stadium will be filled to overflowing and all will be serene again. So why panic?

After all, Saskatchewan Roughriders almost upset Edmonton Eskimos on the weekend; and, if the Riders can come that close, the Lions should be home free. Well . . . maybe closer.

Remember you read it here first.

Otherwise, Monday was "moving day" at Sandown as the harness people officially packed their bags for the return to Cloverdale; and quite a return it should be. General manager Jim Keeling, Jr., was saying that there were over 800 stall applications at Cloverdale for the 110-day meeting that opens one month from yesterday. And this is at least double the number of horses they had last year at the same time for the Cloverdale operation. The plan is to race four days a week, as in past years, until after Christmas. Then it will be decided whether to go to a five-day-a-week operation starting in January. "I think we will have enough horses," said Keeling, "but we will wait until then before making a decision." Keeling also said that uncashed mutuel tickets may be redeemed by mailing them to Cloverdale Raceway, Box 1199, Station "A", Surrey.

Speaking of racing, Seattle Slew certainly put his critics in their place Saturday with a win over Affirmed at Belmont Park. Sure, Seattle Slew is a four-year old as compared to Affirmed, a three-year old, but he did win handily and just two ticks off the track record held by Secretariat. That was the indicator that perhaps last year's triple-crown winner is back in shape and maybe on his way to better things.

Meanwhile, Neil de Macedo of our town also came up with a fitting win at Ex-Park on Saturday when his four-year- old First Purchase breezed home a winner over the Jawl Bros. Silent Code. Twice before this season, First Purchase had been victimized and beaten at the wire by the Jawls— Smiley's Dream turning the trick once and Silent Code the other time. And, speaking of the possibility of a match race at Sandown between First Purchase and either Silent Code or Smiley's Dream, Neil recently indicated that he'd be willing. From all reports it isn't likely that Two Bowls of Rice will be available, but race officials are still working on the possibility of something a little different . . . Also, Capital City Turf Club President George Harknett is probably rueing the day he lost Devilry in a $5,000 claimer. For Devilry on Friday proved that perhaps she's made of sterner stuff by upsetting some of the top female runners on the grounds in an allowance race at Ex-Park and returning the handy sum of $58.80 on the front end.

But that's one of the hazards of racing . . . and, mentioning hazards, how's this for a shocker? Two Keeneland yearlings—one purchased for $190,000 and another withdrawn when a top bid of $535,000 didn't meet the reserve price—died in flight to Ireland immediately after the sale!

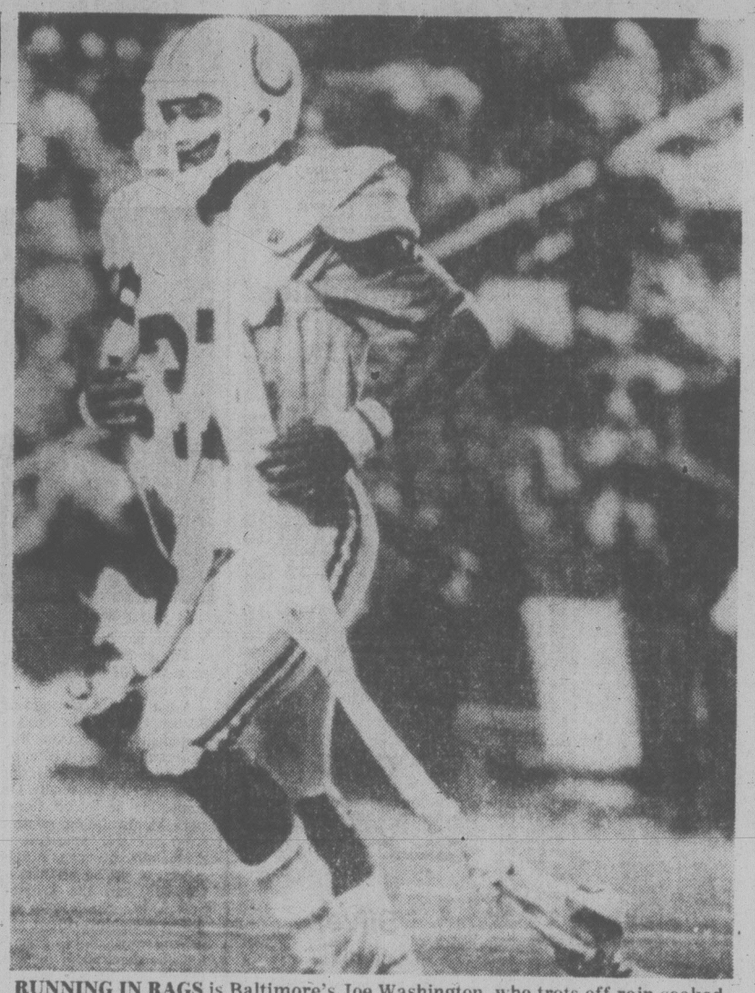
In the Good News category is the announcement from Ken Shields, Extramurals Co-Ordinator at Uvic, that competition will be renewed with Simon Fraser University this fall. A home-and-home series between the men's and women's basketball teams at UVic and SFU has been confirmed for Nov. 14 and Jan. 30. Previously, Canada West University Athletic Association teams were banned from playing SFU because of SFU's policy of awarding sports scholarships. The ban was lifted this year. It is unlikely that SFU will be permitted to join the CWUAA, however, as it is felt, and rightly so, that schools which provide scolarships would have an unfair advantage over schools which do not.

TROTTING RECORD

DELAWARE, Ohio (AP) — Hominy Ros set a world record Monday in winning the $7,137 Ohio Colt Sweepstakes two-year-old trot, the opening feature of Grand Circuit harness racing at the Delaware County Fairgrounds.

Hominy Ros' time of 2:04 1-5 was the swiftest mile ever for a two-year-old trotting gelding on a half-mile track.



RUNNING IN RAGS is Baltimore's Joe Washington, who trots off rain-soaked field at Foxboro, Mass., with jersey hanging in shreds after some rugged fourth-quarter action in National Football League game. Washington Gives Colts a New Life

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The National Football League has a new triple threat in Joe Washington, and injury-riddled Baltimore Colts have a new life.

"It's one of the greatest upsets in pro football history," said Baltimore coach Ted Marchibroda after the Colts scored 27 fourth-quarter points Monday night and shocked New England Patriots 34-27.

Washington, obtained in a trade with San Diego for running back Lydell Mitchell, accounted for three of the touchdowns—on a halfback pass, a 23-yard reception, and a 90-yard gallop with a kick-off return.

The touchdown run broke a 27-27 tie with 1:18 left in the game, as Baltimore won its first NFL contest of the season and dropped the heavily favored Patriots to 1-2.

"It reminds me of my days in college at Oklahoma when things looked really bleak but we always came back and won," said Washington. "I took the kickoff on a good bounce; the wedge was right there. I could see a crease. When I ran outside I knew it was a touchdown."

Earlier in the quarter Washington had given Baltimore a 14-13 lead on his 54-yard pass to wide-receiver Roger Carr. He then caught a touchdown pass from Bill Troup.

New England led 13-7 at halftime and into the fourth quarter before the fireworks started.

New England stormed back with 14 points on a four-yard touchdown run by quarterback Steve Grogan and Sam Cunningham's one-yard plunge.

Three Women Pros Enter Major Pro-Am

BURLINGAME, Calif. (AP) — Women pro golfers will compete with men for the first time in a major pro-am event at a $100,000 tournament scheduled for Jan. 3-6 on three Monterey Peninsula courses, tournament founder Harold B. Firstman announced Monday.

Firstman said three top women pros—Jane Blalock, Pat Bradley and Sally Little—are committed to the tournament. They will compete with 27 men from the Professional Golfers' Association tour, 46 club pros and 234 amateurs.

The tournament, long considered a tuneup for the PGA tour, is the largest pro-am event not scheduled on the tour.

Figueroa Keeps Yanks on Move

By The Associated Press

New York Yankees, and pitcher Ed Figueroa in particular, are playing winning baseball. Boston Red Sox, meanwhile, are playing scoreboard baseball—and hoping . . . hoping the Yankees lose.

Figueroa, pitching brilliantly and regularly since Bob Lemon replaced Billy Martin as New York's manager, scattered seven hits as the streaking Yankees defeated Milwaukee Brewers 4-3 Monday night to retain their 2½-game lead over Boston in the American League East.

The struggling Red Sox had to go 11 innings before subduing Detroit Tigers 5-4, the winning run scoring on Jerry Remy's single.

The Yankees, seeking their third straight division championship, have 13 games remaining—one against Milwaukee and six each against Toronto Blue Jays and Cleveland Indians. Boston has 12 games left—six against Detroit and six against Toronto.

In other AL games, Baltimore Orioles bounced the Indians 10-3, Kansas City Royals beat Seattle Mariners 7-6 in 11 innings, Minnesota Twins trounced California Angels 10-4 and Oakland A's downed Chicago White Sox 6-3.

Cincinnati Reds blanked Los Angeles Dodgers 4-0 in the only National League game. The win moved the second-place Reds to within 7½ games of the Dodgers, whose magic number for clinching the West title remained at five.

"I'm not a .500 pitcher and I haven't been for four or five years," said Figueroa, who at one point was 7-7 this year, but now has won 11 of his last 13 decisions to raise his record to 18-9.

"I started pitching better when Lemon got here," added the Yankees' right-hander. "Billy said he'd use me every fourth day, but he never did."

The Yankees got five hits off loser Bill Travers, 10-11, and Bill Castro, but two of them were successive homers by Reggie Jackson and Lou Piniella in the second inning. Jackson's homer was his 24th of the season and the 337th of his career, moving him into 32nd place on the all-time list, ahead of Joe Adcock.

New York also scored in the sixth on Chris Chambliss' single, an error and Roy White's sacrifice fly, then broke a 3-3 tie in the eighth on a hit batsman, two walks and Mickey Rivers' run-scoring infield single.

All of Milwaukee's runs came on homers—two by Cecil Cooper and one by Sixto Lezcano.

The final New York-Milwaukee score was posted on the Tiger Stadium scoreboard while Boston and Detroit were in the 10th inning.

"At this point (in the season), you've got to look (at the scoreboard)," said Boston manager Don Zimmer. "I just knew we had to win to stay in the race."

The Red Sox wasted little time in winning. In the 11th, Butch Hobson walked, Jack Brohamer delivered a pinch single, Dwight Evans grounded out, Rick Burleson hit into a fielder's choice with pinch runner Frank Duffy being thrown out at home and Remy hit a line single to centre.

Earlier, Dwight Evans and Fred Lynn homered for the Red Sox and Rusty Staub and John Wockenfuss connected for Detroit.

Gary Roenicke hit the first grand slam homer of his major league career, Billy Smith had a three-run triple and Eddie Murray scored four times, leading Baltimore's romp over Cleveland.

Cat Roster Near Limit

Victoria Cougars are just two over the Western Hockey League limit of 19 as they prepare to meet New Westminster Bruins tonight at Courtenay in the fourth game of their seven-game, pre-season series.

Coach Jack Shupe cut four players from the roster Monday, also announcing that Geordie Robertson, the club's leading scorer last season, will be out of action until Friday, when the Cougars return home, with a muscle pull in his left shoulder.

Robinson and MacAdam will rejoin Nanaimo Clippers of the B.C. Junior Hockey League while Sydoruk and Oswald will return to their homes in Edmonton. Both will return to school to complete their Grade 12 studies.

Sydoruk had been impressive in training camp. "We wanted him to stay in Nanaimo," said Shupe, "as we were very keen on him. But he felt he would be better off playing Tier Two hockey in Edmonton while finishing his schooling. He is a real prospect for next year."

Robertson suffered his injury in last Friday's game at Lake Cowichan and missed the games in Powell River, Saturday, and Nanaimo, Sunday.

Shupe says he expects to cut a goalkeeper and a forward before the club's home opener against Calgary Wranglers, Sept 30.

The roster cut leaves goalkeeper Paul Fricker of Vancouver as the only non-Islander among newcomers on the club.

The two new defencemen are Robert Jacobson of Victoria and Tony Feltrim of Nanaimo. Barry Pederson of Nanaimo is a new centre. Brad Palmer of Lake Cowichan and Torrie Robertson of Victoria are at left wing and Bob Smith of Nanaimo and Rob Clavette of Victoria are the new players on right wing.

Other games between the two clubs are scheduled in Campbell River, Wednesday; Gold River, Thursday; and at Memorial Arena, Friday.

Bruins and Cougars have tied twice, 5-5, and 2-2, with the Bruins winning the other game, 5-4.

At Devon, Alta., Monday, Portland Winterhawks scored two goals early in the third period to ensure a 6-2 victory over Edmonton Oil Kings.

Talbot to Take U.S. Post

CALGARY (CP) — Don Talbot, Canada's national team swimming coach, said Monday that he would accept a position with a college in Nashville, Tenn.

Talbot's decision came after earlier reports that he would likely accept a position with the University of Calgary.

Talbot, coach of the Thunder Bay (Ont.) Thunderbolts Swim Club and the national coach at last month's Commonwealth Games in Edmonton and the world aquatic championships in East Berlin, informed the University of Calgary that he has turned down its offer to coach and has accepted a similar post with a college in Nashville.

The name of the U.S. school was not available.

G. L. (Flip) Filippelli of Vancouver, president of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association, was also informed by Talbot of his intentions to move south.

Dr. Roger Jackson, the new dean of physical education at the University of Calgary, said Monday the former Australian swim coach gave no reason for his decision.

"Everything was set for him to come here," said Jackson, a former president of Sport Canada and a long-time friend of Talbot's. "We had agreed to his financial request and Sport Canada was to subsidize him until 1980. He was here two days last week for further discussion and was quite prepared to come.

"Obviously he gave it more thought."

Talbot, who came to Canada from Australia in 1972 and turned the Thunderbolts into a national swim power and many of its members into world-class swimmers, coached the national team to an unprecedented 15 gold medals at the Commonwealth Games.

Moore to Aid N.S. Boxers

HALIFAX (CP) — Archie Moore, former world light heavyweight boxing champion, has been hired on a one-year contract to help develop the amateur boxing program in Nova Scotia, officials announced Monday.

"In earlier, very short visits to this province, the reaction to Moore and his sincerity was tremendous," said Harland Hastings, president of the Nova Scotia branch of the Canadian Amateur Boxing Association.

"I am sure this year-long project will prove fruitful for all Nova Scotians."

Moore will conduct boxing clinics across the province for competitors and coaches and will hold discussions with young people in schools throughout Nova Scotia on drug dependency problems.

"Archie Moore is far bigger than just boxing," Hastings said. "If there is any sports group he can help, we will try to get him there."

Moore held the world light heavyweight boxing crown from 1956 until 1965. During his career he had 136 knockouts. He fought twice for the world heavyweight title, losing both times.

The first try was against Rocky Marciano in 1955. The second came a year later against Floyd Patterson.

The Ladies Are First To Declare Champions

It's club championship time, and we'll have to go with the ladies first.

The champions have been decided at five of the district's six 18-hole clubs and the last one was to be settled today.

Defending champions were back on top at Cedar Hill and Royal Colwood. City champion Pat Derry captured the honors at Colwood for a second successive year by defeating Joanne Smith 3 and 2 in the final. Joan Moore also repeated at Cedar Hill with a victory over Libby Hemmons.

Former-champion Shirley Naysmith scored a 2-and-1 victory over Jean Smith to triumph at Gorge Vale, Dorothy Bigsby defeated Sylvia Boyd by the same margin in the Victoria Club final, and Gerry Bailey captured the Glen Meadows title for the first time with a two-up decision over Dorothy McLeod.

Two father-and-son combinations were among the 16 qualifying for the men's match-play event. The Ron Howards, Sr. and Jr., made it along with Jim and Glen Barlow.

Even the handicap championship was a bit of a family show. Ken Plewes, 83-82—165-28 — 137, and Joe Evans, 78-76—154-16 — 138, happen to work in the same office and finished 1-2. Evans also qualified for the main event, along with Bruce Pelmore, who also works in the office where insurance and golf are the only topics of conversation.

Defending-champion Art Carey, 73-71 — 144, led the qualifers. Others making it include Gord Millin, Lawrie Kerr, Jon Mahovlic, Vic Painter, Al Westgate, John Poyen, Gord Lloyd, Dick Skuce and Emory Wondra.

Gorge Vale also complete its 36-hole qualifying test at the weekend. Grant Milliken, 70-73 — 143, was the medallist and defending champion Robin Steffanick made it by rebounding from a first-round 79 to score a 73 Sunday.

Uplands' championship is down to the fours with Lanny Sawchuck scheduled to face Dave Rands and Tony Pisto going against Ted Pollard next weekend. Pollard eliminated medallist Tom Maftechuk while defending-champion Eric Hibberson did not enter this year.

Medallist Phil Scott and defending champion Don Gowan led the advance into the eights at Glen Meadows. Also in the quarter-finals are Keith Swetnam, Hal Jacobson, Dan Henry, Reg Effa, Mike Foreman and Cliff Green.

With Paul Harris off at the University of Reno, Oak Bay will have a new champion. Medallist Mike Fowles, Bill McPherson, Stu Bland, Bill Thompson, Al Manson, Doug Munro, Mike Morrill and George Bigelow successfully cleared their first-round hurdles.

Provincial high school champion Rick Gibson won't be defending since his family has moved to Vancouver. Rick has taken up membership at Marine Drive.

BRIEFLY: Annual Victoria and District awards dinner is Friday at Gorge Vale. . .Hole-in-one celebrants in recent days include Cliff Brown, on the 15th at Glen Meadows; Milt Robinson, getting his on Cedar Hill's lucky 13, and Jack Botham, a visitor from Kelowna who aced Gorge Vale's second. . .

Amateur Hockey In B.C. Gets New Fee Structure

CRANBROOK (CP) — The annual meeting of the British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association (BCAHA) voted in favor of a new method of assessing the fee paid to the association by its members.

More than 300 delegates voted at the weekend meeting after learning the withdrawal this year of Spokane Flyers from the Western International Hockey League means an annual loss for the BCAHA of more than $8,000 in gate assessments and registrations.

The BCAHA would have had to operate with a $3,000 deficit if the assessing methods had not been readjusted. Previously, two per cent of the total gate per game went to the BCAHA.

With the restructuring, senior leagues will pay $35 a game including exhibition, regular season and playoffs while Junior A will be assessed $25 a game but will not be charged for exhibition games.

Junior B will be assessed $10 a game, Intermediate A $15 and Intermediate B $5.

Delegates, however, approved a resolution sponsored by the BCAHA to increase insurance payments for Junior B players this season. This means insurance fees for Junior B will be $6 a player compared with $3 last year.

A resolution was defeated to double the mutual aid payments for minor hockey players to $2 from $1 a year.

For the eighth consecutive year, delegates defeated a resolution by the Kelowna Minor Hockey Association that a tier system be set up in minor hockey. The resolution resulted from lopsided scores in provincial playoffs.

The BCAHA formed an executive committee that will report on the tier system in minor hockey at the next annual meeting in Penticton.

Bob Mullock of North Vancouver was re-elected for a second term as association president and delegates approved the 1980 annual meeting for Victoria.

"I didn't like the look of that fish when I gave it to him."

Boys' Field Hockey Schools Scheduled in Four Districts

Boys wishing to learn more about field hockey will soon have opportunities to improve skills and knowledge.

Scheduled by the Vancouver Island Field Hockey Association to start next month are four schools for boys of eight to 13 years who will pay an $8 fee for a series of six classes during a three-week period.

First on the list is the Oak Bay area, where the first class is slated for Oct. 2 and the deadline for registration is Sept. 28. Registration forms are available at the Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

Final date for registration in Esquimalt is Oct. 4 for classes starting six days later. Forms may be obtained at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Details for hockey schools in the Gordon Head and Juan de Fuca areas have yet to be completed.

Shaw Fifth In Marathon

Bruce Shaw of Victoria finished fifth in the men's division of the Canadian national marathon championships at New Glasgow, N. S., Sunday.

Shaw's time was 2:32:37 while the winner, Rick Hughson, was timed in 2:21:54.

Lions to Hone Passing Game

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jerry Tagge is not washed up as a Canadian Football League quarterback, says head coach Vic Rapp of British Columbia Lions.

"He was down before and he came back," Rapp said about Tagge following the Lions' fourth consecutive defeat, 14-4, Sunday in Calgary against the Stampeders.

"He's a hell of a student of the game; he's the type of guy you look for. He's not washed up."

Rapp said that Tagge and reserve quarterback Gary Keithley will go back to a training camp situation today when the Lions begin preparation for their next game—Sept. 24 in Winnipeg against the Blue Bombers.

Tagge and Keithley combined to throw three interceptions against the Stamps and Tagge, the Western Football Conference's outstanding player in 1977, was particularly ineffective.

"We're going to have to abandon even working on the running game," said Rapp. "We've got to concentrate everything on passing.

"We're going to go back to keeping stats on the quarterbacks like in camp. We're going to put those two guys in competition with each other and whoever comes out ahead is going to play (in Winnipeg).

"They're going to play six football games—five during the week and one on Sunday."

Tagge completed just six of 18 passes against Calgary for 49 yards, with two interceptions, while Keithley was good on two of four attempts for just five yards. Keithley also threw an interception deep in B.C. territory.

Rapp said the Lions would not bring in a new quarterback because "at this stage it doesn't do any damn good. . . it takes too long to learn the system."

Evergreen Breaks Mast; Trails Series

DETROIT (CP) — The dismasting of Canadian challenger Evergreen has forced another delay in the Canada's Cup yachting series.

Evergreen broke her mast on the fifth leg of the 235-mile long-distance race Monday and Agape, as she had done when Evergreen suffered damage in the middle-distance race, sailed on to an uncontested victory.

The win puts Agape, the American defender from Detroit's Bayview Yacht Club, into a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven-point series that likely won't resume until Friday or Saturday. The jury will decide on the layover duration after inspecting Evergreen's damage this morning.

Evergreen's mast snapped off five feet above the deck about 15 minutes after she had rounded the fourth mark and headed into the second windward leg. She held a four-minute, three-second lead over Agape at the mark.

The Royal Hamilton Yacht Club entry was on a starboard tack when a chain plate that anchors one of the mast stays broke. Without the support of the stay, the mast couldn't withstand the strain and it broke.

Thunderstorms and squalls had produced violent seas on Lake Huron. Evergreen had just come over a large wave and crashed, down into the valley behind it when the mast went.

Green lodged a protest after the race because the first mark was six miles away from where it was indicated on the charts. Evergreen had been three quarters of a mile in the lead on the first leg as the boats approached the mark.

She was forced to alter direction and bear up to the misplaced mark and Agape, running well inside the true lay line, wound up running true to the misplaced mark and rounded first with a 1:18 lead.

The jury disallowed Green's protest on the grounds that, because Evergreen was unable to complete the race, the misplaced mark hadn't jeopardized her chances of winning.

Evergreen had been forced to drop out of the middle-distance race last week when she grounded and damaged her daggerboard and rudder. Had she won the long-distance, overnight race, Evergreen would have wrapped up the Canada's Cup.

"It's unbelievable," Green said. "We're so close to it. We haven't lost a race yet."

Evergreen won the opening two short-course races before running into trouble on the longer courses. When the series resumes, the boats will close out the series with two more short-course duels.

Incogs Lose By One Run In Cup Match

VANCOUVER — Brockton Point of Vancouver has captured the Tomalin Cup, emblematic of the club championship of the Victoria and District Cricket Association and the Mainland Cricket League.

Incogs batted first and were all out for 125. Jim Wenman scored 54 runs and Pat Ely 19.

Jim Reminds Us It's Just a Game

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Baseball, it has been said, is a little like drama—the art is best when there is some comic relief to temper the high passions of the play.

This is why Casey Stengel, with his crazy logic and convoluted English, is the game's patron saint. This is why nobody can tell you who won the home-run title in 1951, but lots of schoolkids know that 1951 was the summer St. Louis Browns inserted a midget named Eddie Gaedel into the lineup as a pinch-hitter in a game against Detroit Tigers. He walked.

If 1978 is remembered as a great baseball year—and it most likely will be—no small credit should be given its abundance of comic relief.

Few would argue that New York, by nature a nervous town, became fairly hysterical when its Yankees were embroiled in the Martin-Jackson-Steinbrenner brouhaha. Talk about high drama. But fewer still would deny that the resolution of that dilemma—the post-dated rehiring of Martin—was a fine bit of comedy.

And when the season entered its final month, hot-tempered races were aflare in all four divisions of the major leagues. The National League West was almost cruelly intense, with Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco Giants and Cincinatti Reds within arms length of one another, clawing for the top.

And then came Jim Bouton, plopping himself right down in the middle of it all like the impervious drop-in neighbor who doesn't care if you are late for a date with the Joneses, he wants to chat.

The Dodgers, the first big league team to face Bouton in seven years, were beside themselves when Atlanta Braves' owner Ted Turner decided to bring the old man up from Double A in the heat of a pennant race. But something happened when Bouton took the mound.

The balls he threw did strange things on the slow journey to the plate—they bobbed and blooped and sometimes even danced past swishing Dodger bats.

For three innings, Bouton kept the Dodgers hitless before they bombed him in the fourth. The Dodgers weren't gentlemen.

"A disgrace to the game," said Dodger captain Davey Lopes, who had struck out as opening hitter. "A circus atmosphere, said Reggie Smith, who weakly grounded out in his only at-bat.

The next week, the Giants got their chance against the 39-year-old rookie, and came up with a lonely run—unearned—to Atlanta's 4. The Giants weren't gentlemen, either.

"He got us out, but he doesn't have anything," said the Giants' Darrell Evans. "It was the most humiliating experience of the year."

"I don't want to see him again and I don't want to face him again," said Bill Madlock. "Bouton was a joke."

And what a fine joke it was. Madlock, a two-time NL batting champ, went hitless against Bouton.

Bouton, this season's very own Falstaff, took it all in stride.

"You see, there's a very big macho thing in sports," he said during a visit to Los Angeles after the Giant victory. "Ballplayers don't mind being overpowered, but they don't like being outsmarted."

As for his return to baseball, with all the cameras and reporters, being likened to a circus, Bouton responded:

"Anybody who's ever been to a World Series knows what a real circus atmosphere is. It wasn't that bad. I mean, the Dodgers have seen cameras before, the Giants, too. Maybe they just didn't like where the cameras were pointing."

The Giants themselves, he reminds us, once had a pretty good pitcher named Stu Miller "who made a career out of throwing slow stuff."

"The rule only says you've gotta throw it over the plate, right? It doesn't say how fast it's gotta get there."

When the dust cleared, the wars were still in high gear, the family jewels were still safely in place. Bouton hadn't ruined anything; he'd just reminded us, like Stengel and little Eddie Gaedel had before him, that baseball is, after all, only a game.

What will happen to Bouton from here?

"I don't know. I'm a happy-go-lucky guy," he says. "I honestly don't know what my plans are. I have no idea what I'll be doing beyond my next start in Houston."

JIM BOUTON

SOCCER PLAYER DIES FROM FALL DURING MATCH

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Valtencir, a Brazilian professional soccer player, died Sunday after he broke his spine as a result of a fall during a game before a crowd of 15,000 in Maringa, in the southern state of Parana. He was 32.

Valtencir was taken from the field unconsicious and died minutes later. The accident happened late in the first half and the game was suspended at that point.

Doctors said that the player fell in a bad position after heading a high ball, and broke the upper part of his spine.

Promoters Threaten Ali With $10M Slander Suit

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Unless Muhammad Ali apologizes for calling two promoters of his fight with Leon Spinks "white dagoes" and racists, the promoters say they will sue him for $10 million.

"I think he did $10 million damage to our reputations," Jake DiMaggio, one of the two promoters, said late Monday. "He is the greatest moral coward I have ever seen. He does not care what he has done to the families involved. He does not care what he has done to this town."

DiMaggio said the damage suit would be filed in federal court today unless he or city councilman Philip Ciaccio, a partner in thel local promotion of the fight, heard from Ali.

"We will not file the lawsuit if Muhammad Ali returns to New Orleans and we take Municipal Auditorium and fill it up with every black person who wants to come and every document from the outset, every piece of paper, every agreement, every loan that was signed is laid out on the table," DiMaggio said.

"And he can bring his own battery of lawyers with him. And after he reads them, he puts his arms around Jake DiMaggio and Philip Ciaccio and says that the black community of New Orleans and the people of New Orleans owe a debt of gratitude to Jake DiMaggio and Philip Ciaccio and says 'I was wrong.'"

DiMaggio's outburst was prompted by an Ali diatribe earlier in the day after the boxer learned that DiMaggio and Ciaccio had filed a $1 million suit against their black partners, Sherman Copelin and Don Hubbard. That suit was later dropped after the white partners said that the funds allegedly misappropriated by Copelin and Hubbard had been accounted for.

"No charge of racism was ever made until we had the audacity to protect our legal rights by filing a lawsuit," a joint statement by DiMaggio and Ciaccio said.

Ali was supposed to read prepared remarks about the settlement between the two factions of Louisiana Sports Inc (LSI). But instead he lashed out at the men he called "two white dagoes."

"Whenever a nigger starts messing with money, the white man would rather see you with his woman, in his neighborhood, in his politics, in his church. The only thing he doesn't want to see you with is his money," Ali said. "And these niggers got the money. No white man was backing (the fight) and they (Hubbard and Copelin) did the brain work."

Contacted in Chicago, his manager, Herbert Muhammad, said, "All I can say is that I wish Ali would have stuck to the fight and have me stuck to handling the promoters. I know in my heart he is not a racist. I don't know what prompted him, if he said that."

Ciaccio said that whatever the reason, he and DiMaggio had not seen the final figures on attendance at the fight or how much money LSI, which they formed with Copelin and Hubbard, had made from the promotion.

Copelin and Hubbard, two of New Orleans most powerful black political leaders, had previously parlayed their power into several other well-publicized financial serapes.

Whalers Sign Garrett

HARTFORD (AP) — John Garrett, a World Hockey Association all-star goaltender while playing for Birmingham Bulls, has signed a multi-year contract with New England Whalers.

Whalers' director of hockey operations Jack Kelley said Monday that Garrett, a five-year veteran of the WHA, would be a major factor as the club makes its bid for the 1978-79 championship.

"John is a perennial all-star and has already established himself as one of the outstanding young goalies in the game who still has his best years ahead," Kelley said.

Garrett, a five foot, eight inch 170-pounder from Trenton, Ont., launched his WHA career in 1973-74 with Minnesota Fighting Saints, moving to Toronto Toros part way through the 1975-76 season.

Jim Reminds Us It's Just a Game

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Baseball, it has been said, is a little like drama—the art is best when there is some comic relief to temper the high passions of the play.

This is why Casey Stengel, with his crazy logic and convoluted English, is the game's patron saint. This is why nobody can tell you who won the home-run title in 1951, but lots of schoolkids know that 1951 was the summer St. Louis Browns inserted a midget named Eddie Gaedel into the lineup as a pinch-hitter in a game against Detroit Tigers. He walked.

If 1978 is remembered as a great baseball year—and it most likely will be—no small credit should be given its abundance of comic relief.

Few would argue that New York, by nature a nervous town, became fairly hysterical when its Yankees were embroiled in the Martin-Jackson-Steinbrenner brouhaha. Talk about high drama. But fewer still would deny that the resolution of that dilemma—the post-dated rehiring of Martin—was a fine bit of comedy.

And when the season entered its final month, hot-tempered races were aflare in all four divisions of the major leagues. The National League West was almost cruelly intense, with Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco Giants and Cincinatti Reds within arms length of one another, clawing for the top.

And then came Jim Bouton, plopping himself right down in the middle of it all like the impervious drop-in neighbor who doesn't care if you are late for a date with the Joneses, he wants to chat.

The Dodgers, the first big league team to face Bouton in seven years, were beside themselves when Atlanta Braves' owner Ted Turner decided to bring the old man up from Double A in the heat of a pennant race. But something happened when Bouton took the mound.

The balls he threw did strange things on the slow journey to the plate—they bobbed and blooped and sometimes even danced past swishing Dodger bats.

For three innings, Bouton kept the Dodgers hitless before they bombed him in the fourth. The Dodgers weren't gentlemen.

"A disgrace to the game," said Dodger captain Davey Lopes, who had struck out as opening hitter. A circus atmosphere, said Reggie Smith, who weakly grounded out in his only at-bat.

The next week, the Giants got their chance against the 39-year-old rookie, and came up with a lonely run—unearned—to Atlanta's 4. The Giants weren't gentlemen, either.

"He got us out, but he doesn't have anything," said the Giants' Darrell Evans. "It was the most humiliating experience of the year."

"I don't want to see him again and I don't want to face him again," said Bill Madlock. "Bouton was a joke."

And what a fine joke it was. Madlock, a two-time NL batting champ, went hitless against Bouton.

Bouton, this season's very own Falstaff, took it all in stride.

"You see, there's a very big macho thing in sports," he said during a visit to Los Angeles after the Giant victory. "Ballplayers don't mind being overpowered, but they don't like being outsmarted."

As for his return to baseball, with all the cameras and reporters, being likened to a circus, Bouton responded:

"Anybody who's ever been to a World Series knows what a real circus atmosphere is. It wasn't that bad. I mean, the Dodgers have seen cameras before, the Giants, too. Maybe they just didn't like where the cameras were pointing."

The Giants themselves, he reminds us, once had a pretty good pitcher named Stu Miller "who made a career out of throwing slow stuff."

"The rule only says you've gotta throw it over the plate, right? It doesn't say how fast it's gotta get there."

When the dust cleared, the wars were still in high gear, the family jewels were still safely in place. Bouton hadn't ruined anything; he'd just reminded us, like Stengel and little Eddie Gaedel had before him, that baseball is, after all, only a game.

What will happen to Bouton from here?

"I don't know, I'm a happy-go-lucky guy," he says. "I honestly don't know what my plans are. I have no idea what I'll be doing beyond my next start in Houston."

JIM BOUTON

SOCCER PLAYER DIES FROM FALL DURING MATCH

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Valtencir, a Brazilian professional soccer player, died Sunday after he broke his spine as a result of a fall during a game before a crowd of 15,000 in Maringa, in the southern state of Parana. He was 32.

Valtencir was taken from the field unconsicious and died minutes later. The accident happened late in the first half and the game was suspended at that point.

Doctors said that the player fell in a bad position after heading a high ball, and broke the upper part of his spine.

Promoters Threaten Ali With $10M Slander Suit

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Unless Muhammad Ali apologizes for calling two promoters of his fight with Leon Spinks "white dagoes" and racists, the promoters say they will sue him for $10 million.

"I think he did $10 million damage to our reputations," Jake DiMaggio, one of the two promoters, said late Monday. "He is the greatest moral coward I have ever seen. He does not care what he has done to the families involved. He does not care what he has done to this town."

DiMaggio said the damage suit would be filed in federal court today unless he or city councilman Philip Ciaccio, a partner in thel local promotion of the fight, heard from Ali.

"We will not file the lawsuit if Muhammad Ali returns to New Orleans and we take Municipal Auditorium and fill it up with every black person who wants to come and every document from the outset, every piece of paper, every agreement, every loan that was signed is laid out on the table," DiMaggio said.

"And he can bring his own battery of lawyers with him. And after he reads them, he puts his arms around Jake DiMaggio and Philip Ciaccio and says that the black community of New Orleans and the people of New Orleans owe a debt of gratitude to Jake DiMaggio and Philip Ciaccio and says 'I was wrong.'"

DiMaggio's outburst was prompted by an Ali diatribe earlier in the day after the boxer learned that DiMaggio and Ciaccio had filed a $1 million suit against their black partners, Sherman Copelin and Don Hubbard. That suit was later dropped after the white partners said that the funds allegedly misappropriated by Copelin and Hubbard had been accounted for.

"No charge of racism was ever made until we had the audacity to protect our legal rights by filing a lawsuit," a joint statement by DiMaggio and Ciaccio said.

Ali was supposed to read prepared remarks about the settlement between the two factions of Louisiana Sports Inc (LSI). But instead he lashed out at the men he called "two white dagoes."

"Whenever a nigger starts messing with money, the white man would rather see you with his woman, in his neighborhood, in his politics, in his church. The only thing he doesn't want to see you with is his money," Ali said. "And these niggers got the money. No white man was backing (the fight), and they (Hubbard and Copelin) did the brain work."

Contacted in Chicago, his manager, Herbert Muhammad, said, "All I can say is that I wish Ali would have stuck to the fight and have me stuck to handling the promoters. I know in my heart he is not a racist. I don't know what prompted him, if he said that."

Ciaccio said that whatever the reason, he and DiMaggio had not seen the final figures on attendance at the fight or how much money LSI, which they formed with Copelin and Hubbard, had made from the promotion.

Copelin and Hubbard, two of New Orleans most powerful black political leaders, had previously parlayed their power into several other well-publicized financial scrapes.

Whalers Sign Garrett

HARTFORD (AP) — John Garrett, a World Hockey Association all-star goaltender while playing for Birmingham Bulls, has signed a multi-year contract with New England Whalers.

Whalers' director of hockey operations Jack Kelley said Monday that Garrett, a five-year veteran of the WHA, would be a major factor as the club makes its bid for the 1978-79 championship.

"John is a perennial all-star and has already established himself as one of the outstanding young goalies in the game who still has his best years ahead," Kelley said.

Garrett, a five foot, eight inch 170-pounder from Trenton, Ont., launched his WHA career in 1973-74 with Minnesota Fighting Saints, moving to Toronto Toros part way through the 1975-76 season.

IMF Urges Patience Over Dollar's Drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The International Monetary Fund urges patience for those who are worried about the United States dollar, saying the decline should benefit the U.S. and world economies although it may take a few years.

The IMF says the steep plunge in the dollar's value and the gains made by other currencies will help to narrow the huge U.S. trade deficit while erasing the trade surpluses of countries such as Japan and West Germany.

It said there should be a substantial improvement in the pattern of world trade in the next two to three years. It takes that long for the full effects of changed currency values to adjust trade imbalances, it said.

"The cumulative changes in exchange rates that has occurred over the two years have generally been in a direction helpful to the adjustment process," the 134-country institution said in an annual report.

It said it intends to exercise its recently-acquired authority to provide for close scrutiny over currency exchange rate policies of member countries, including their domestic economic policies.

Questions of exchange rates and economic policies will be on the agenda for the IMF's annual meeting here Sept. 25-29. President Carter is expected to address the opening session.

With U.S. support, the IMF's power and influence have increased substantially in recent years. It has been the chief source of funds for many countries that were faced with possible bankruptcy because of the increase in world oil prices and a long worldwide recession that followed.

Lending in the year ending in April totalled $3.1 billion, down from the record 1977 total of $5.6 billion. Total outstanding loans were nearly $17.5 billion.

The U.S. provides about 20 per cent of the IMF's financial resources.

In its report, the IMF expressed disappointment at the sluggish economic growth of most industrial countries in the last year, saying unemployment remains at recession levels in nearly all countries except the U.S. "Industrial countries continue to be burdened by substantial under-utilization of resources," it said.

Only the United States, with a five-per-cent growth rate, was successful in reducing economic slack left over from the 1974-1975 recession, it said. Growth of European countries averaged only two per cent.

As a consequence of the low growth rates, the world's trade expanded only five per cent last year, down from 12 per cent a year earlier and an average growth of nine per cent in the decade ending in 1972.

"The combination of slow growth of world trade and high unemployment appeared to be generating increased resort to protectionist actions and danger that these might escalate," the IMF said.

It noted with approval that some countries have recently changed their policy to promote faster growth. While it did not mention them by name, West Germany and Japan are among them.

U.S. DEFICIT SHRINKING

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States registered a $3.26 billion balance-of-payments deficit between April and June, less than half the size of the first quarter deficit, the Commerce Department said today.

Although the April-June performance represented the eighth consecutive quarterly deficit, it was still a great improvement over the preceeding two quarters.

The balance-of-payments is a measure of money exchanged by the United States in trade, tourism and service transactions with foreign nations, plus government payments abroad. Economists consider it an important barometer of the United States' international economic standing.

The $3.26 billion deficit in the April-June quarter was less than half the size of the $6.86 billion deficit in the first quarter and the record $6.97 billion deficit during last year's fourth quarter. The United States finished 1977 with a deficit $15.27 billion, surpassing by far any full-year deficit in history.

Administration officials have predicted that the 1978 deficit would be in the same range as last year's.

Travellers' Cheque War Is About to Begin

American Express, which has made millions since it invented travellers' cheques more than 80 years ago, is being challenged by Visa and Master Charge, whose credit cards dominate the bank card business.

The market at stake is a big one. Travellers' cheque sales worldwide will amount to $25 billion this year, more than half of that in North America.

The competition offers the prospect of large profits for banks and perhaps lower charges for customers.

"The worst that can happen to the public is that the price of travellers' cheques won't rise," said John Reynolds, who heads Master Charge's travellers' cheque program. "I think everyone will benefit."

Visa president D. W. Hock said: "I don't think it's inconceivable somebody could end up paying interest to the customers," who now often pay fees to buy the cheques.

U.S. Okays Fish Imports

WASHINGTON (CP) — The U.S. International Trade Commission ruled today that $130 million of fish imported annually from Canada neither injures nor threatens to injure the domestic fish industry.

The unanimous vote by commission members means that the fish, mainly groundfish from the east coast, will continue to be imported duty free.

U.S. fishermen's groups, angered by Canadian government support programs for fishermen and fish processors, have been attempting for more than a year to have some countervailing duty imposed on the fish and on about $70 million of fish already subject to some duty.

Under U.S. laws, such support programs may be determined to constitute export bounties or grants. A countervailing duty of up to the value of the bounty may be imposed.

In June, the U.S. treasury department waived the imposition of countervailing duty after Canada agreed to eliminate most of the subsidies, which, at their peak, totalled almost 17 per cent of the value of the fish.

When the waiver expires in January, the dutiable fish will be subject to a countervailing duty of about one per cent.

The question of duty on duty-free fish, however, has to be decided by the trade commission, which operates under different rules. It must determine that the imports are threatening or damaging the domestic industry before it may recommend imposition of duty.

Richard Sharood, lawyer for the U.S. fishermen, expressed some regret about the commission decision but said he had expected that the body would find Canadian fish to be causing no damage to the U.S. fishermen.

Castro Interview

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro says it would have been "a tremendous insanity" for Cuba to have plotted the murder of U.S. President John Kennedy, the House of Representatives assassinations committee reported today.

Healing Substance: Shrinks Piles

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

Most important of all—results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue.

Now Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H. Ask for it at all drug stores. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Capital Punishment Tops Restraint Issue, PM Finds

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau told a byelection crowd Monday night that his government is fully committed to genuine restraint in spending.

But the partisan crowd showed more interest in such emotional issues as capital punishment than in the finer points of government financial policy.

Trudeau's appearance at the rally was to build support for Liberal candidate Robert Bockstael in St. Boniface, a long-time party stronghold that is one of 15 federal ridings where byelections are set for Oct. 16.

Trudeau opened his unscripted address to the crowd of about 1,400 by reviewing his declared efforts to reduce the rate of growth in government spending.

He dismissed critics who contend that the cuts are not genuine because they only concern government spending allocations that have not yet been made.

But the subsequent questions from the audience for the most part ignored economic and fiscal policies and concentrated instead on a variety of issues, ranging from the right to secrecy in the mails to proposed changes in the constitution. Capital punishment came up towards the end of the 1½-hour meeting.

"It does seem that a lot of people don't agree with us," Trudeau said of the capital punishment issue generally, although he noted that leaders of the Progressive Conservative and New Democratic parties also backed abolition.

Trudeau said there may be an argument for holding a referendum on some easily-understood issues, although such an approach does not constitute direct democracy.

"Direct democracy is not possible, because you can't have 23 million Canadians—or 10 million adult Canadians — come down and make laws."

The rally came near the close of a day that started with Trudeau officially opening the International Cereal and Bread Congress, a week-long gathering of scientists, and included visits to spots in St. Boniface riding.

Trudeau was to return to Ottawa today.

Bockstael is in a four-way race against Conservative Jack Hare, a local businessman; Social Credit Party of Canada leader Lorne Reznowski; and an NDP candidate yet to be named.

MONTREAL POSTAL VAN HIJACKED

MONTREAL (CP) — Armed thieves took about 245 bags of air mail from a postal truck early today, leaving the 22-year-old driver handcuffed and hooded in the back of the van, police say.

Post office spokesman Jacques Filteau said the mail, which had little or no monetary value, was destined for Canada and the United States.

Investigators suspect the thieves were misinformed about the contents of the truck. For some time all valuables and registered mail have been transported in armored vans.

Canadians Losing Respect for the Law

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal government erosion of civil liberties has caused Canadians to lose respect for the law, says Alan Borovoy, counsel for the Canadian Civil Liberties Association.

In a speech at Carleton University Monday, Borovoy said the erosion has been aggravated by Prime Minister Trudeau's creation and enforcement of laws to his political advantage.

He also said Justice Minister Otto Lang's recent proposal for a national referendum on capital punishment is only one example of how government is jeopardizing basic democratic principles.

"You cannot treat Canadians like damn fools," he said. "Nothing has changed on the issue of capital punishment. The only thing that has changed is the prime minister's perception of his own political self-interest."

Borovoy said Trudeau was backing down and feeling the political crunch when he told reporters at his weekly news conference Thursday that although he would discuss the possibility of national referendums on issues like abortion, legalization of marijuana and capital punishment he would not allow a referendum on capital punishment.

Lang's proposal contravene's the principle of cabinet solidarity because normally a minister does not make public suggestions on such sensitive issues without prior discussion with the rest of the cabinet, he said.

Borovoy also attacked the McDonald commission, which is investigating RCMP wrongdoing, as a political donothing.

FILMS CHOSEN BY INVESTORS?

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian director Paul Almond says investment dealers soon will determine the type of films that are made in Canada.

"They will be marketing only a certain kind of picture," he said. "I don't think films working from a personal vision will be possible next year."

Almond spoke during the weekend at a panel discussion on the effect of Canada's tax shelter legislation on the country's film industry. The discussion was part of the Festival of Festivals, which began last week and continues until Thursday.

He said a new breed of young producers "is going to want to go for a little Hollywood package."

"We're going to have to conform to American standards," Almond said.

Robert Lantos, co-producer of the movie In Praise of Older Women, said movie makers should be grateful for tax incentives, which he said have made possible the beginnings of a true Canadian film industry.

Career Woman '78

elizabeth forbes

What does it mean to be named Canada's young career woman of 1978?

How does it affect someone personally and in everyday life?

Victoria's Shainaz Damji, a new Canadian of East African origin, gained that title in July and she says it has been a "tremendous experience."

One of the "proudest moments of my life and indeed, one of my greatest achievements" is the way she puts it.

She tells you of the belief in her ability to win, as expressed by so many people, and the confidence of Roz Moir, her supervisor in the provincial ministry of mines and petroleum resources, "who said right from the start that I would reach the top."

She mentions the pride shown by that ministry in a letter she received from the deputy minister, saying how delighted they all were to have the young career woman of 1978 as assistant editor in its publications sector.

This country-wide contest is sponsored, every two years, by the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs (CFBPWC).

Mrs. Damji took her first step toward the title last February when the Victoria chapter of the National Secretaries Association entered her in a local contest sponsored by the Victoria Business and Professional Women's Club.

As winner at that level, she went on to compete in a provincial contest held during the annual meeting of business and professional women's clubs of British Columbia and the Yukon at Kamloops in May.

Again declared the winner, she travelled (all expenses paid) to Moncton, N.B., where she competed against entries from other provinces in the finals, held at the CFBPWC binennial convention in July.

"Those days in Moncton were exciting and stimulating," she tells you. "I met so many interesting people, sat in on so many worthwhile discussions and made so many new friends."

"It will always remind me that I was the national young career woman of 1978."

Shainaz Damji

Shainaz was born in Nairobi, as were her mother and grandmother.

Her father, Sherali Mawani, came from India to East Africa with his parents as a young boy.

In her growing years she showed a definite interest in languages and her education became a continuous search for knowledge in that field.

She took high school training and an executive secretarial course in Nairobi, and studied languages in Switzerland and West Germany.

Today she is fluent in English and French, has a good knowledge of Italian, German and Spanish and several other languages and is qualified to do translations, editing and proof-reading of publications.

Her father died in 1972, at a time when unrest in various parts of East Africa was increasing, so the family (mother, four daughters and a son) decided to leave Nairobi and start a new life elsewhere.

There were relatives and friends, including Sadru Damji, in this country, "so it was decided we would come to Canada and join them at Guelph, in Ontario."

It was in Guelph that the Damjis were married and there that Shainaz worked as a bilingual secretary with Armco Canada Ltd. He later worked there as a trilingual executive secretary with Dr. Margaret Anderson, chairman of the department of languages at University of Guelph.

It was in Guelph that, after hours, she taught students and grown-ups something of the Islam religion, in a mosque maintained by the Ismaili sect.

A little over a year ago when he was named to the teaching staff of Pearson College of the Pacific, the Damjis came to Victoria to live.

Shortly after that, she joined the publications section of the ministry of mines and petroleum resources.

Her responsibilities there include editing, proof-reading, printing-publishing matters, manuscripts and correspondence.

They also include handling inquiries, maintaining mailing lists regularly, the use of IBM magnetic tape selectrics, the electronic composer and related duties.

In any spare time at her disposal, she is again teaching the basics of her religion — this time to 15 or more children of families from East Africa now living in this area.

"We do not have a mosque here," she says, "but we do have a meeting place in Esquimalt."

Her mother and two sisters now live in Calgary, "so we see each other quite frequently."

Another sister is in England and the brother, married and with two children, is still in Guelph.

The future?

Ask Shainaz that question and her face takes on a determined look.

"I have very ambitious dreams," she confesses, "and they include a challenging position for me, somewhere, some time, with wide responsibilities.

"I've got that goal firmly in my mind and while I don't know how long it will take, or whether I will ever reach it, I'm continually working toward that end."

The stars, just like the sun, rise in the eastern part of the sky. Each follows its unique path across the sky before setting in the west.

Select a bright star and jot down its position with respect to a fixed object such as a tree or a building. Make a note of the time. The next few nights, at the same time, compare the star's position with regard to that fixed object. You will notice that the star has moved further west.

As our seasons progress, the constellations gradually drift westward. Those stars that were in the sky on a midsummer night will be below the horizon at the same hour during midwinter. The changing appearance of the sky is caused by the earth's rotation and revolution around the sun.

You will also learn that individual groups of stars have changed their formations over the centuries. A diagram shows the stars of the Big Dipper as they appeared thousands of years ago, as we see them now, and as they will look in the distant future.

False Nails Now A Fashion Additive

By BARBARA TRUDELL
London Free Press

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — At a time when fashion demands attention to every detail in order to achieve a total look, attractive hands and nails are important.

A silver, paper-thin material is fitted around the fingertips and a hardened substance is painted on the nails to build them up. The nails are then shaped and sized with an electric file.

They look magnificent when first applied but when the originals begin to grow back, trips must be made to the salon to have the nails filled near the cuticle where they grow out.

Fills are needed about every three weeks and cost about $15. The original application costs about $30.

There is a type of false nail called Eve-N-Tips, priced at $40, which is applied only to the top of the fingernail so there is no growing out process and filling is not needed.

However, these nails require regluing, buffing and a manicure about every two weeks.

Women with false nails are instructed to use a polish remover that contains no acetone, because acetone is the chemical that soaks off false nails.

Hands look dreadful when the nails are removed, the original nails being cracked and torn. But they grow in completely in four to six months, so there is no damage in the long run.

Many women find that once they have false nails applied, they are too long for typing, dialing the phone or fastening jewellery.

Officials at several salons that apply the nails say they must be treated with care because they tend to crack.

Some officials say they are not satisfied with the results and have had many complaints.

There is no guarantee how long the nails will last and continuous maintenance is expensive.

However, the maintenance can be done at home. All that is needed is the glue sold in the salon, a buffer and a good file.

A do-it-yourself kit for $3 includes the necessary equipment and instructions and, with the help of a friend, anyone can easily do their own nails.

But in the experience of many women, false nails aren't all they're cracked up to be.

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

Dear Dr. Otter. I am 17 years old and I like guys a lot but I'm too shy to show it. I go out with a lot of them and then get dropped because I am too boring and not worth their while.

When I am with a guy I don't know what to say of what to do, and so I feel depressed. I put on an act more than just trying to be myself. Is there something wrong with me or am I just going nuts.

ANSWER: It sounds to me as though you think guys have to be treated differently from anyone else, and you panic because you don't know the formula for how to treat them.

How do you speak to anyone? Parents, girls, grown-ups, bus drivers? That's how you speak to guys. Not all guys are special, and when a special one comes along you will find something special to say.

If you are out with a guy, find out what he is interested in and ask him questions, instead of worrying about what you should say to him because he is a guy. Most likely, he will think you're great because you ask him instead of bothering about yourself. When you meet one who asks you about yourself, tell him honestly, and if he drops you because you are who you are, then good riddance.

No, you're not going nuts: You've got a notion that guys are a different species because they are of a different sex. They are just people, and if they act like animals, find some that act like people.

Dear Mr. Vichert: I am a 15-year-old boy. At a recent dance, I danced with a girl who held me more and more tightly during the slow dances. After one of these dances she told me she was dizzy and we sat down. The next thing I knew she had her arms around me and we were kissing.

I have now known her for several weeks. We are seeing one another on a boyfriend-girlfriend basis. What bothers me is that things were so easy that night at the dance. I have always thought that kissing was not for the first date and that a girl and boy should know one another better before they do so. In fact, we were not even on a formal date!

She is my first steady girlfriend, but she had boyfriends before me and is much more sexually experienced tham myself. It seems that I could have my way with her to any extent outside of sexual intercourse. I had previously thought that girls played the hard-to-get role and that this adds to a romance. Am I old-fashioned? Have times changed so drastically? Should I continue to see this girl?

ANSWER: Whether or not you decide to continue seeing your girlfriend should be based upon your affection for her. If you like and care for her and she likes and cares for you then it would seem like a good idea for you to continue your relationship.

Today there are many different standards of what is acceptable behavior. This does make things very confusing because the rules sometimes seem a bit uncertain. From your description it would seem that you are more traditional in your expectations and she would seem more non-traditional. This does not have to be a problem if you both can become comfortable with each other's expectations.

For you to become too "untraditional" may be uncomfortable, and for her to become too "traditional" may make her feel uncomfortable. If the two of you can meet comfortably in the middle and respect each other's differences than you could have a very stimulating relationship.

However if you begin to fight over the differences, then it may be necessary for each of you to find someone whose expectations are more similar.

Differences between people can add to a relationship or it can detract. These differences are areas that you should talk over together so that you both can get a better understanding of each other.

It could be that you both need each other at this time — you need her to be a bit more untraditional and she needs you to be traditional. As long as the two of you complement each other then you should continue going with her.

Dear Dr. Powell: I'm 15 and have a rather embarrassing problem. Everytime I wear a bikini you can see hair. What can I do to get rid of pubic hair? I've tried shaving it off but whenever I do, red dots and rashes appear that make me look even worse.

ANSWER: Women with a similar problem to yours have tried various solutions. Shaving has not worked for you. You might try using a preparation that removes the hair called a depilatory, available at the cosmetic counter at the pharmacy. Some women use a bleach so the hair is blonde and less conspicious. You might try one of these other methods to solve your problem.

Hairy Solution To Food Shortage

★ ★ ★

Can human hair solve the world's food supply problem? Barber Bill Black thinks so.

"Hair is the best, most concentrated natural plant fertilizer you can find on this planet," said Black. "I've been using the stuff on my philodendrons and vegetables for years. It's not only high in protein and nitrogen content, but human hair contains 27 minerals and trace elements as well."

Some people may well think Black is a little wingy when he makes such statements, but others believe he's on to something really big. In fact, for the past year Black has been packaging and selling his barbershop floor sweepings to a steadily growing number of believers.

"If the clippings from every shop were regularly applied to a compost heap," he said, "an enormous amount of nitrogen could be saved, since six to seven pounds of hair contain one pound of nitrogen. That's about the same amount of nitrogen as 100 to 200 pounds of cow manure."

Black has been researching the chemical makeup of human hair for over three years and comparing his data with agricultural reports on the effetiveness of various commercial soil supplements. And his study has led him to make the following statement:

"Why, the hair thrown away by New York barbers alone could supply the entire fertilizer needs for all of India."

While experimenting with the hair, Black discovered that it is an unusually good insulation material, too. "That's why it's growing on the human body in the first place," he said.

Another thing Black discovered about hair is that if it's not going to be used for fertilizer or insulation, care should be taken in its disposal.

"Whatever you do, don't burn those clippings," Black said. "The burning of human hair pollutes the air with extremely toxic gases. Unfortunately, that's the way many large cities get rid of it — in huge garbage incinerators — but they're making a big mistake."

Black isn't waiting around for some university of government agency to investigate his theories. He's had enough experience with hair as fertilizer to be convinced he's right.

And so every evening Black sweeps his barbershop floor, sterilizes his collection of clippings, mixes it with sand and organic compounds, then bags and labels the concoction under the brand name "Fert-HAIR-Lizer."

How do Black's customers feel about having their locks packaged and sold? "Most of them like the idea," he said. "It's kinda like being reincarnated. I just hope they don't start charging me for a haircut."

HYPNOSIS IS USEFUL

Dr. L. L. COLEMAN

The subject of hypnosis recently came up in one of our college courses. Is the science of hypnosis a recognized one and is it respected in today's psychotherapy? — Miss N. D.

Dear Miss D.:

About 20 years ago the American Medical Association carefully evaluated the whole spectrum of hypnosis and came to the conclusion that it is a valuable addition to psychotherapy. Highly trained specialists in psychology employ this remarkable form of treatment as an addition to, rather than as a replacement for, other forms of therapy.

Unfortunately, some people in show business or those who play parlor games without any training in psychology have made stage performances out of the phenomenon of hypnosis. This is a hazardous game.

In New York City, the Morton Prince Clinic for Hypnotherapy and the Institute for Research on Hypnosis and the Institute for Research in Hypnosis have established themselves nationally for their scientific contribution to modern-day hypnosis. Dr. Milton V. Kline, director of these centres, said, "Hypnosis is recognized as a very significant and useful tool in the control of intractable pain, in insomnia, for some forms of headache, for weight reduction, and for breaking the cigarette habit."

Hypnosis also plays a significant role in uncovering some of the basic sources of neurotic behavior.

I was impressed by a column you wrote about the hidden dangers in one's home. I read it and instead of doing something about it, promptly forgot it. About six months ago, I slipped on a vinyl floor while trying out a pair of new shoes. My broken wrist is a constant reminder that the house isn't always safe. — Mr. C. I. W.

Dear Mr. W.:

It is always sad to learn that an accident of any severity happened in the home. For, normally, one has the feeling that one is surrounded therein with security.

I have always felt that an excellent health precaution is a careful survey of all potential household hazards. When was the last time most people looked at their home's wiring? The frayed areas may stay for years before causing a flash fire. Scatter rugs, slippery surfaces, extention cords, slippery bathtubs, inadequate handrails along the stairs to the cellar are only a few of the many household hazards that can be found if one really looks.

One of my readers said that he, his wife, and three young children play a game every six months. This takes about an hour twice a year. Everyone enthusiastically tries to uncover a potential trap that was not visible to the others. What an excellent investment in safety is such a simple exercise.

By the way, in a national survey it was dumbfounding to find how few kitchens had a good fire extinguisher. Does yours?

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: To get right down to the nitty-gritty, how does a reasonably intelligent, fairly attractive 26-year-old single woman meet men? I'm not frantically searching for a husband — or even a "meaningful relationship" — but I wouldn't be adverse to either.

I don't want a man who's interested only in a one-night stand, but it would be nice to connect with a guy who shares some of my interests and could brighten up my dull, boring life. (I'm a 9-to-5 office worker.) Any ideas? — ROBIN.

DEAR ROBIN: I received no fewer than 100 letters this week asking the same question, so I'll kill 100 "Robins" with one stone and proffer the following:

The best way to meet decent men is through one's work, church, friends and interests — out in the mainstream of life. And no matter how lonely you are, avoid those lonely hearts clubs, single bars and the phoney computer dating services.

A girl who's in politics can make many new and interesting friends while gathering names for a petition, registering voters, or working on a campaign.

Don't overlook adult education classes in the evening — particularly subjects that appeal to men. (Scuba diving, aeronautics, auto mechanics, sailing.) You may find that you're the only woman in a class of 30 men. (Whoopee!!!!!)

Sports offer opportunities galore. If you're not keen on outdoor sports, try indoor sports. How about pool or billiards? If you live in a singles apartment with a pool table, pick up the cue. (Ha!) If you don't live in a singles apartment, visit a friend who does. Men hang around good pool players. (They even hang around poor ones so they can teach them. Either way, you can't lose).

And last but not least — travel. Consider one of those affordable group tours. Get out and see the world, and the world will see YOU!

Above all, don't play games. If you find someone attractive, don't worry about who makes the first move. It's a whole new world out there. Help yourself.

DEAR ABBY: Without commenting on the legal, moral or social aspects of the situation, here are the facts:

My son and his girl friend, who are living together, have announced that they are going to have a baby. They are very happy about it. The girl's friends have "showered" her with gifts. As far as I know, the prospective parents have no plans to marry in the immediate future.

My question: How do I announce the birth of my first grandchild? Is there a way I can show my love and acceptance of this child — just as I love and accept my son — without seeming too inconsiderate of others who may have a strong opposition to such a situation? Sign me...

FIRST TIME GRANDMA

DEAR FIRST TIME: Don't make an official announcement. Your obvious love and acceptance of the child will speak for itself. The "others" who oppose such a situation must surely realize that you are not responsible for your son's actions.

Dress for Men Is Early Drab

By BRUCE LEVETT

LONDON (CP) — Clothes make the man, and nowhere is this more evident than in this sceptred isle.

Take the case of my fire-engine-red sports jacket and matching (almost) purple slacks which blended nicely into the background in Washington, my last post.

So what do you do with the red jacket and purple slacks? Simple — your wife donates them to the vicarage jumble sale.

The British have a costume for every occasion — mostly drab insofar as the men are concerned.

And that's why the whole thing began to go egg-shaped when I was invited to the village fete by the local squire.

Except, you're not.

Where, for instance, is the tattersall vest? To say nothing of the plus-fours and stout walking shoes and knee-length hose?

No cap? Never mind, I'm sure we can find something.

"May I lay out your dinner jacket, sir?"

Damn — I left it behind. Best I can do is the old tuxedo.

"I'm sure that will be fine."

Should all this sound like something out of P. G. Wodehouse, accept it. That's the way it is on a country weekend.

A wise man once said the British don't really mind much what you do, so long as you're properly dressed while you are doing it.

For the women, it's comparatively easy. The sweater set — cardigan and long-sleeved pullover — still is de rigueur down in the country.

Failing that, a light summer frock and frilly hat.

However, the skin-tight slacks, hacking jacket and flat cap are making inroads — on the ladies, of course.

A country weekend has to be experienced to be believed. Dances around the maypole. Egg-and-spoon races for the youngsters.

Try your luck in the "lucky dip" fishpond.

But the British are nothing if not adaptable. Which is why it created somewhat of a stir after the jumble sale when the vicar strode out — resplendent in fire-engine-red sports jacket and matching (almost) purple slacks.

"Born to the purple," cracked one parishioner.

"It wouldn't have done for the duke, sir," he intoned. "It would never have done for his grace."

Bio-dex

Sept. 20/78 — By Ken J. Michaels — Your computerized biorhythm

HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle- You're getting into difficulties with a person close by. Don't lose control of your temper.

6-10 Neutral Cycle- Positive thinking will encourage others not to give up even though they are confronted with a difficult problem.

11-15 Positive Cycle- Take time to go through old papers. You could find some very interesting reading.

A recent study showed that industrial accidents increased on high emotional days and I found that a little surprising at first. Reading further I understood the reason — a high emotional Bio-dex can lead to over-confidence, one of the biggest reasons for accidents of all kinds. Try slowing down when your Bio-dex speeds you up — it could keep you from adding to those statistics.

SNAKES GIVEN HEAVE-HO

HENRYETTA, Okla. (AP) — Poisonous snakes officially are no longer welcome within the limits of this city of some 7,000 people.

In keeping with the voters' wishes, city council has just enacted an ordinance banning the keeping of poisonous snakes or other dangerous reptiles.

City residents voted 886 to 418 to ban the creepy crawlers. The ordinance enacted by the council carried out the voters' wishes.

At the same election, residents voted 851 to 504 to retain an ordinance prohibiting the holding of public dances. The council said no action was needed on that matter since the anti-dancing ordinance already was on the books.

Suspended Teacher Reinstated Again

COQUITLAM, B.C. (CP) — The Coquitlam School Board decided Monday night to reinstate a teacher it had suspended first for possessing marijuana and then, after that suspension had been lifted, for not reporting to work.

Board chairman Eunice Parker said Dennis Hilton, 29, will be notified by letter today to return to teaching at Centennial school as soon as permitted by his physician.

"Our information is that Mr. Hilton was vacationing in England under doctor's orders although we did not receive that information until Sept. 6," said Mrs. Parker.

"The board felt there was sufficient doubt under the circumstances to reinstate him, without pay for the time he was not working," she said.

The auto mechanics teacher and his lawyer Ted Seifred met with the board in a closed meeting Monday night.

Told of the board's later decision, Seifred said his client was delighted, but still intends to sue for wages lost during both suspension periods.

Hilton was first suspended from teaching Feb. 28 after he had been given a conditional court discharge for possession of marijuana. The discharge was later dismissed and the board reinstated Hilton.

After Hilton failed to appear for the first day of classes, the board held an in-camera meeting Sept. 12 and decided to suspend him again.

Seifred said the vacation Hilton took on doctor's orders prevented him from returning on time.

"The Coquitlam school board seems to want to run up the court costs for the taxpayer," said Seifred.

"Hilton was a suspended employee with no legal obligation to notify the board of his intentions yet the board put the onus on my client and gave him only a weekend's notice to report to work."

Education Minister Pat McGeer has criticized the school board for lifting Hilton's suspension and has promised to amend the Public School Act to allow boards to dismiss teachers given conditional discharges.

FINAL TESTS ON MILFOIL

PENTICTON (CP) — The 1978 campaign against Eurasian milfoil in Okanagan Lake ended today with the application of the controversial herbicide 2,4-D to five acres of Okanagan Lake.

The herbicide program has been opposed by several environmental groups and some local residents, and several confrontations between protesters and water investigation branch employees occurred during applications this summer.

The Okanagan Indian Band council had objected to applications in the north arm of the lake, but Peter Scales, spokesman for the water investigation branch, said the application today was made without incident.

Scales said crews applied 18 kilograms on each of the five acres. Buffer zones were established, alternate water supplies were provided and all area residents were informed, Scales said.

Results of tests of the program's effectiveness won't be known until next spring, he said.

Forest Exports To Soar?

VANCOUVER (CP) — By the year 2000, the Canadian forest industry will have to increase lumber exports by more than 50 per cent just to meet the demands of its current markets, the chairman and chief executive officer of Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. said Monday.

Robert Rogers made that forecast while addressing the opening session of an international conference on transport and handling in the pulp and paper industry. About 400 industrialists from 20 countries are attending the conference.

"To meet the demand of just its traditional markets in the U.S., Western Europe and Japan, the Canadian forest industry will have to increase exports in lumber by more than 50 per cent, wood pulp by 100 per cent and paper products by almost the same amount."

He said the estimates come from government projections of market expansions.

By the year 2000, "renewable resources like forest will be even in greater demand," he said. "They will be in demand not only for shelter, communicating and education, but also, possibly, as seedstock from which a new breed of fuel chemicals and food will emerge."

Rogers said Canada now exports more than 60 per cent of its lumber, 35 per cent of its wood pulp and 80 per cent of its newsprint.

Penalty for Ads Back in Court

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Law Society had no alternative but to cite a North Vancouver lawyer for the type of advertising he did in opening his new law office, a B.C. Court of Appeal judge commented Monday.

Justice J. D. Taggart said the society, which has a duty to protect the public and oversee the conduct of the legal profession, would otherwise have been inviting other lawyers to follow suit.

Justice Taggart, Justice A. B. Robertson and Justice E. E. Hinkson were hearing an appeal by law society against a B.C. Supreme Court injunction. The court order stops the society from imposing any penalty against lawyer Donald Jabour until his suit against the society has been heard.

Jabour was cited by the law society after he ran ads in the daily newspapers announcing his new law service and giving sample prices, and for erecting a large illuminated sign at his office. Society rules limit lawyers to one or two small, formal ads when they open a practice.

Jabour then launched a suit against the society, alleging its advertising restrictions violated the federal Combines Act.

He was later found guilty at a society hearing of violating the guidelines, and now faces a six-month suspension, but won the Supreme Court injunction that prevents any penalties against the lawyer.

Appearing before the Appeal Court Monday, the society argued that its own internal appeal system should have been used first by Jabour.

James Macaulay, counsel for the law society, said that society benchers do not prohibit advertising by lawyers when they open a practice, but it must be in good taste and informative, but not commercial.

Macaulay contended the Supreme Court injunction be quashed on grounds, among others, that the law society should not be required to stop carrying out its duties. He said none of Jabour's rights have been threatened.

Bryan Williams, lawyer for Jabour, contended the imposing of penalty should await the outcome of his combines suit because he will claim the law society's no-advertising policy is unlawful on grounds it unduly restricts free competition. He said the combines act covers legal services.

Williams said the public needs more information about the prices they can expect to face when they walk into a lawyer's office. The appeal continues.

Extra $7M For Bank

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Bank of British Columbia has enlarged its capital base by approximately $7.6 million as the result of a rights issue covering 255,277 shares at $30 each to shareholders, a bank spokesman said Monday.

He said 244,756 shares, or 95.9 per cent of the offering, were taken up by shareholders. The remaining 10,521 shares were sold privately.

The spokesman said the additional shareholders' equity will enable the bank to continue its growth and to service the financial needs of its customers.

Ont. Wants Court Ruling

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's attorney-general has challenged the federal government to refer the role of the monarchy and other issues in a proposed act for constitutional reform to the Supreme Court of Canada to determine their constitutionality, not just the matter of reconstitution of the Senate.

Otto Lang, Canada's justice minister and attorney-general, announced last week that a section of Bill C-60 that proposes to change the Senate to a House of the Federation would be referred to the Supreme Court for consideration of its validity.

Only the federal government can refer matters to the Supreme Court.

In a letter to Lang released Monday, Attorney-General Roy McMurtry, said the opinions of the Supreme Court justices in such a reference case could strongly affect constitutional review now under way.

The provinces will wish to be represented and to participate in arguments before the court on all aspects of constitutional reform, McMurtry wrote.

Ontario's opposition to changing the monarchy already has been strongly expressed by Premier William Davis at the provincial premiers' conference in Regina last month.

Ministers concerned with constitutional matters from all the provinces will meet in Montreal later this month to co-ordinate their opposition to the proposed federal legislation, David Allen, a spokesman for the Ontario attorney-general's office, said in an interview Monday.

Governments of most of the provinces feel it is beyond the jurisdiction of the federal government, under the British North America Act, to make changes to the constitution, Allen said.

If the matter goes before the Supreme Court, the provinces will have the opportunity to argue their case and may win a ruling that changes by the federal government alone are unconstitutional, he said.

McMurtry wrote that in the present federation, the Queen is equally the head of the federal and provincial governments.

Provisions proposed in the act to alter the relationship between the Crown and the governments of the provinces are of doubtful constitutional validity, he wrote.

If the Supreme Court ruled the federal government could not change the Senate, other provisions in the act may also be ruled invalid, McMurtry said.

Bill C-60 deals with, among other things, the structure of the Senate, the status of the monarchy and a proposed Canadian charter of rights and freedoms.

"If other constitutional questions under the proposed act are to be referred to the Supreme Court, it would seem inexcusable to omit to refer these questions as well," McMurtry said in the letter, adding that the best method of ascertaining the proposals' validity would be to refer the whole act to the court.

30% Income Tax Cut Seen As First Step

TORONTO, (CP) — A 30-per-cent reduction in income taxes in the United States and Canada would be prudent, but only a first step in solving problems created by too much government and regulation, a former U.S. treasury secretary says.

William Simon said calculations show the average American effectively works for government until May 11 each year and that if recent trends continue, his children will pay six months of their yearly income in taxes.

Simon, speaking at a luncheon sponsored by the National Citizens' Coalition, said the U.S. has been moving quickly toward collectivism and away from individual sovereignty.

He said people were puzzled that following California's overwhelming approval of Proposition 13, which cut property taxes by 57 per cent, public opinion polls showed that the most popular politician in the U.S. now is Senator Edward Kennedy.

Simon said Kennedy, a Democrat, is "the strongest advocate of big government in the U.S. senate."

A member of the Republican administrations of both former presidents Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford, Simon said the apparent contradiction was the result of concern among Americans over the threat by inflation.

He said the middle-class poor, families in which the wife has taken a job and the father has taken out a second mortgage on the house, were getting desperate.

Proposition 13 was a vote against inflation, he said.

At the same time as demanding more control over their money, people were demanding national health care programs and beginning to favor wage and price controls, Simon said.

Moores Slams Union Heads

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The leaders of 6,000 striking Newfoundland public employees have acted irresponsibly in pushing their members onto the picket lines, Premier Frank Moores said Monday night.

About 3,000 general service workers, including stenographers and middle-management staff, walked off the job earlier in the day after contract disputes with the treasury board.

Another 3,000 workers, including highways and building maintenance staff, refused to cross picket lines and later joined the others in declaring a general strike.

Moores accused union leaders late Monday of improperly presenting a new contract offer made by government to the striking general service workers and highway and maintenance staff.

"The fact is, there was a new offer on the table," the premier said in a statement. "That offer was not put to the membership properly."

The premier urged the workers to approach union leaders and find out from them the status of contract negotiations prior to the walkouts.

"I don't like the idea of people acting irresponsibly and this is certainly what's happening here," Moores said.

The premier also said he hoped the strike would be short.

"Our supervisors tell us they can actually carry on until Christmas, but it will certainly be over before then."

Ed Maynard, treasury board president, said essential services were being maintained by management personnel.

He said the treasury board had sought to avert the walkout by general service workers with a two-year contract offer with total wage increases of 17 per cent. However, the union refused to discuss it.

Whenever one makes an overcall, he is supposed to have a good, five-card or longer, suit headed by no worse than the K-J-10 (or A-K, A-Q, or K-Q). The reason for this high-card requirement is that it is more-or-less a command for the overcaller's partner to lead that suit, thus getting the defenders off on the right foot.

But, too often, one overcalls on a broken-down suit; and as a result, the overcaller's partner leads that suit, with dire consequences. Today's deal is a case in point.

On West's opening lead of the spade ace, East played the discouraging deuce. Belatedly, West shifted to the jack of clubs. Declarer won the trick with dummy's ace and laid down the diamond king, West winning with the ace. A club was then led to East's queen, but that was the defenders' last trick (South could dispose of his two remaining clubs either by ruffing them, or discarding them on the board's queen and jack of diamonds).

East's "lead-directing" overcall of one spade, on a jack-high suit, was a terrible call. Had he passed against South's ultimate four-heart contract West would have made his normal opening lad of the club jack. If the trick were won by dummy's ace, East would eventually obtain the lead via the club queen. And if, instead, declarer elected not to win the opening lead with the board's ace of clubs, East would overtake his partner's jack with the queen.

Once East obtained the lead, he would make the natural shift to the jack of spades, entrapping South's king, and enabling East-West to cash two spade tricks. The defenders would then have made one club trick, one diamond and two spades, resulting in declarer's defeat. But with East overcalling in spades, West dutifully opened the ace of spades at trick one, thus giving South a present of the spade king.

The moral of this deal is a simple and obvious one: If you're going to make bad overcalls, be prepared to accept the consequences.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, September 20
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on cost, new starts, fresh concepts, original format, getting to heart of matters. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently. You have support, you need not be pushed around where prices, profits are concerned. Know it and act accordingly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your instincts are on target — follow them. Lead rather than permitting others to set pace — or policy. Aquarius, Cancer, Leo figure prominently. Do not guip food. Show consideration for your own digestive system!

GEMINI (May 21- June 20): You find ways to "walk around" an obstacle. Be discreet — avoid direct confrontation. Accent on temporary delay, confinement. Dreams, illusions, some fears and doubts are part of your personal scenario. Humor is a strong ally. Know it; laugh at your own foibles.

CANCER (June 21- July 22): Accent on wish fulfillment, displaying strength where desires, convictions are concerned. Friend goes into detail about a complicated plan. Obtain hint from Gemini message. Do what you feel is right for you, not what you think others might expect of you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Open dialogue with one who is in seat of authority. You can get points across; you'll be surprised at positive results. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius figure prominently. Articulate ideas, thoughts — member of opposite sex will encourage and inspire.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent on travel, communication, spiritual insight. Be diplomatic, gain overall view, refuse to argue with family member. Someone wants you to be more vulnerable than you have a right to be. Hold fast to basic principles.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Define terms, talk language that is understood. Means get off sidelines and into game. Accent on resolution, determining extent of rules and regulations. Partner, other close associate or mate discusses expenses, payments, collections.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on documents, marital status, production, priorities, relationship that is intensified. Maintain profile that is the opposite of aggressive. Go slow, lie low, play waiting game, rather pertinent data. You'll soon use material to your own, great advantage.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your security is enhanced by greater knowledge. Stick to reality of situation. Obtain valid appraisals. Don't expect something for nothing — refuse to give up something of value for nothing. Cancer, Leo and another Aquarian figure prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on visits, calls, trips, relatives who want you to fulfill "social obligations." Gemini figures prominently. Highlight charm, humor and versatility. Avoid scattering your forces — welcome opportunity for valuable contacts through social event.

IF SEPTEMBER 20 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, intuitive, artistic. You are able to sense moods of others. Cancer, Capricorn persons play key roles in your life. You are loyal, a collector in sense that you tend to accumulate goods, stamps, coins, art objects, pieces of string. You must be alert so that you are not possessed by your possessions. You'll have opportunity for new start, marvelous contacts in October.

Dief Marks 83rd Birthday At Public Archives Party

Purpose of the gathering was to open the exhibit Lifetime to Legend, a collection of about 70 of more than 2,000 items to be displayed in the Diefenbaker Centre soon to be built at the University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon.

But it also gave the former prime minister a chance to greet 500 Ottawans attracted to the event by invitations and advertisements.

EDMONTON — Rod McLennan, counsel for Premier Peter Lougheed appealed Monday a ruling that he must provide details of the sections of a CBC television program called The Tar Sands which Lougheed considers to have defamed him.

McLennan ran a video recording of the 50-minute program for three judges at the Alberta Supreme Court Appellate Division and argued that it was the totality of the program which was defamatory, not any one part.

MONTREAL — Speculation is mounting that maverick Liberal MP Serge Joyal will announce before the end of the week that he is jumping to municipal politics to challenge Jean Drapeau for the job of mayor of Montreal in the Nov. 12 civic election.

CALGARY — American film actress Linda Blair, 19, was remanded to Nov. 24 to face charges of possession of marijuana in Calgary provincial court. Blair, best known for her role in The Exorcist, was alleged to have a small amount of marijuana in her possession when she arrived at Calgary International airport from the United States Aug. 15.

SAINT JOHN — Robert Higgins, the former leader of the New Brunswick Liberal party, announced Monday he will not be a candidate in the Oct. 23 provincial general election.

COBOURG, Ont. — A spokesman for the Cobourg-based Help Honduras Foundation has reported that Fleur Hackett, 24, of Sudbury, and Liz Sved, 29, of West Vancouver, who supervise an orphanage in Nicaragua, have not been hurt in the recent civil disorder in that counrty.

EDMONTON — A pathologist says freon gas, a propellant used in Pam spray-on cooking oil, killed a 15-year-old city girl, Tracey Moore, when she tried to get "high" sniffing the oil recently.

Police had earlier said the oil itself caused the death by coating her lungs.

LONDON — Rock drummer Keith Moon cooked himself a steak breakfast, ate it in bed beside his Swedish fiancee and then took a "vast overdose" of sleeping pills that killed him, a coroner's court heard.

CHARLES LINKED WITH CZECH COUNTESS

LONDON — Prince Charles' latest lady friend is emigre Czech Countess Angelika Lazensky, who lives in Paris where she works for an organization called International Public Relations Associates, several British newspapers reported today.

The romance, the papers all said, began when the couple met at Deauville, France, during the summer of 1977 and blossomed when the countess was a guest at Balmoral, the Queen's Scottish home, last weekend.

Elizabeth, Countess of Cawdor, one of the Queen's friends, was quoted in the London Evening News as saying: "I have met this young lady once or twice when she has been to Balmoral. She is very pleasant indeed.."

None of the papers carrying the story reported the countess' age, but the Evening News said her family fled from Czechoslovakia in 1947, just before the Communist takeover.

Grant Policy Defended

VANCOUVER (CP) — Education Minister Pat McGeer said Monday that every research agency in North America awards grants for research projects to its own committee members and if directors of such agencies disagree with the policy, they should resign.

McGeer was responding to a conflict-of-interest charge from directors of the provincially-funded Educational Research Institute of British Columbia (ERIBC).

Several of the board's 11 directors criticized the institute's practice of giving money to board members such as University of British Columbia professor Patricia Arlin, who received about $9,000 from the institute while sitting as a member of an advisory committee.

Mrs. Arlin's husband and another committee member also received money.

McGeer said: "It happens in every research institute in North America. It's quite standard and appropriate. It's not unusual in any way."

He said the people best suited for research projects are also the most adept at knowing which proposals are worth funding.

Other complaints from members involved the high cost of operating the agency and some of the controversial projects approved by the staff.

McGeer, who said he had no intention of dismantling the agency or of restricting its spending, said projects which turn out to be silly or useless won't be renewed.

"I have a great deal of respect for ERIBC. It's done a good job over the years," he said.

"Directors should resign from the board if they don't agree with board policy," he said.

Contract Extended

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis has accused Barbara Wallace (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat) of creating a false impression and making statements without checking the facts.

Curtis said in a letter to Mrs. Wallace he was dismayed by her recent statement that a monthly subsidy of $642 had been withdrawn from Cowichan Valley Stage Lines.

He said this was wrong, and the government recently extended the contract with the company until May, 1979, by which time he hopes arrangements will be worked out with the Urban Transport Authority for continuation of the service with local government support.

Official Opening

Health Minister Bob McClelland and Municipal Affairs and Housing Minister Hugh Curtis will be among those attending.

Dr. George Strachan, president and executive director of Gillain Manor Ltd., says the treatment centre will start out with a staff of about 29 which will increase to 75, including service personnel, when it reaches full occupancy.

BOOZE SEIZED AT CONCERT

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A weekend rock concert that attracted about 1,500 people about 60 kilometres west of here turned out to be a sobering affair as RCMP seized about $3,500 worth of liquor at roadblocks set up near the concert gates.

Several charges of possession of alcohol by minors, impaired driving and possession of drugs were also laid as a result of seizures made at the roadblocks on both roads leading to the concert at Lakeside Resort on Cluculz Lake.

Resort owner Eli Iantkow said he had hundreds of complaints about the roadblocks and feels police overstepped their authority in making the seizures.

"People come here every weekend of the summer and consume alcohol in the cabins," he said.

Settlement Offer Refused

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Faculty members and students at Cariboo College are offering $10,500 to either the college administration or locked-out non-teaching employees in an attempt to break deadlocked labor negotiations at the central interior campus.

"We think it's a ridiculously small amount to disrupt the college with," said faculty association president David Reiter. "The faculty and students have offered to provide it to either side to get them back, but so far neither side has taken us up on the offer."

The Cariboo College council announced Monday a one-week closure of the college because of disruptions caused by the dispute which began Aug. 18 when the 73 support staff employees were locked out by the college.

During the closure, college officials and representatives of Local 900 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) are to meet with labor ministry officials in an attempt to end the dispute, college officials said.

"Our feeling is that the council and CUPE are being irresponsible," Reiter said. "The two parties most affected, the students and faculty, are being ignored."

Reiter said the faculty has vowed to continue study sessions until the college council and the union agree to binding arbitration.

"The council has another thought coming if it thinks closing the college will take pressure off them."

College affairs officer Chuck Bishop said the administration does not believe that arbitration is "particularly useful." He said the faculty and student offer of $10,500 is "not an appropriate method of resolving the problem."

Ann Latham, acting chairman of CUPE Local 900 said the union has been pressing for binding arbitration for some time.

The dispute centres on wages and on a re-evaluation of jobs agreed to by both sides in 1974.

Lawyers Fan Out To Towns

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Small Canadian towns and villages are a growing mecca for young lawyers.

An unprecedented number of law-school graduates in Canada are setting up practices in small communities, and deans of a number of Canadian law schools are predicting a growing trend.

"The number of applicants for admission to law schools has more than doubled during the last decade," said Dean D. L. Johnston of the school of law, University of Western Ontario. "Consequently the number of graduates is also increasing to the point where there is a slight oversupply.

"The situation has not yet reached the crisis stage but graduates now are looking at smaller communities. Not only is there opportunity there but the close contacts in a smaller town and a lower cost in housing and cost of living have an attraction for today's graduates."

Concern over the increased number of applicants for admission to Canadian law schools—Western had 2,650 last year for 150 places—was expressed by Johnston in a paper published by The Gazette, publication of the Law Society of Upper Canada, last winter.

In an interview, he suggested that Canada might follow the same course as the United States and England where many graduates from law schools turn to law-related careers.

Cambodian Acts 'Shocking'

OTTAWA (CP) — An external affairs report that amounts to a devastating indictment of Cambodia for human rights violations has been turned over to United Nations officials.

External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson told reporters last week that the report reveals a shocking situation and he intends to raise the matter at the forthcoming meeting of the UN General Assembly.

The report which tells of Khmer Rouge troops systematically beating persons to death, was compiled by Canadian embassy personnel in Thailand after interviews with 30 refugees.

It tells of arbitrary arrest, detention and execution, cruel and unusual punishment, religious suppression and denial of freedom of speech — even freedom to complain about lack of food.

In a submission to a subcommission of the UN Commission on Human Rights, the government said the evidence constitutes "a strong prima facie case for an urgent investigation of the situation with respect to human rights in Democratic Kampuchea (Cambodia)."

"All evidence available to the government of Canada, including the recent interviews, indicates that Democratic Kampuchea has systematically violated the human rights of its citizens in a manner contrary to both the spirit and letter of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights."

The report says: "Those arrested for real or imagined crimes are imprisoned without food, water or sanitation.

"Executions are carried out with hardwood sticks, hoes and axes which are used to beat and-or dismember the condemned."

Arrest, detention and execution often came at the whim of local officials who might act on the unsupported accusation or denunciation of an individual of the ruling party.

Crimes often punishable by death, included lateness for work, complaints about work, complaints about lack of food, requests for improvement in living conditions and having been an official or soldier of the previous Lon Nol regime.

"Buddhist monks have been defrocked, statues of the Buddha destroyed; and pagodas razed or used as granaries since 1975. Religious medals, praying or religious observance of any kind are absolutely forbidden. Priests who have resisted have been executied."

The Canadian report comes as pressure is developing in the United States for action to halt the Cambodian human rights violations.

U.S. Senator George McGovern has been calling for an international force to overthrow the Cambodian regime.

—A 37-year-old farmer: Before a family related to a Lon Nol colonel disappeared, its three-month-old baby was disembowelled by Khmer Rouge troops and thrown outside the family's hut.

—A 52-year-old former Lon Nol soldier: At evening work meetings in 177 communes, chiefs announced that former soldiers, teachers and monks would all be killed regardless of rank because otherwise they would resist the Khmer Rouge.

—A 37-year-old former police corporal: A girl who complained about decreasing rations was left tied to a stake for two days without food and was beaten with sticks and stoned by children of Khmer Rouge.

—A 34-year-old former clerk: A man accused of stealing two potatoes was tied for three days without food, kicked and mistreated and then disappeared,

—A 38-year-old former agriculture minister specialist: The second offence of such minor crimes as being late for work resulted in double work shifts, no food or more usually execution; once saw several hundred bodies of military men beside a road; saw a family of 13 including women and children bayonetted to death; several young girls strangled or poisoned for refusing th marry Khmer Rouge soldiers; attractive girls often raped and killed.

—A 48-year-old former corporal: Six families of former military officials, including women and children, dug trenches, were tied together and then were beaten to death in front of other villagers.

—A 22-year-old former student: Khmer Rouge arrested a fellow student and, while he was still alive, cut out his liver with a surgical knife, saying they wanted it for medical purposes. "This barbarous execution was carried out in front of several villagers for educational purposes."

Soviet Tupolev Plane Crashed During Test?

There has been speculation about a Tupolev disaster on Soviet territory following the disclosure last week that the airliner has been withdrawn quietly from its passenger runs to the central Asian city of Alma Ata.

Western sources hinted that signs of a second crash showed up on U.S. satellite reconnaissance photographs of Soviet territory, but they could give no details of the location or the exact date.

There has been no official explanation for the curtailing of passenger services. A civil aviation ministry spokesman said today that the TU—144 was "continuing with flights according to program" — an apparent reference to test flights.

Asked about a possible crash, the spokesman said he had no information on any such incident and thought reports of one were mistaken.

The Tupolev made its maiden passenger flight to Alma Ata last Nov. 1. It was scheduled to continue a once-weekly service there from Moscow's Domodedovó Airport. The Western sources said the last known passenger flight was in early June.

It was not clear whether the crash occurred before or after that date, but one Western informant said he thought it came later.

The sources speculated the test plane was trying modifications such as the addition of fuselage fuel tanks designed to extend the airliner's range.

The flight to Alma Ata is a relatively modest haul of 3,200 kilometres and Western experts believe the Soviets have been prevented so far from flying the Tupolev on longer routes by a fuel consumption problem.

Fraud Rampant In U.S. Gov't

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A congressional report charges that the scandal-tarnished General Services Administration is not the only agency whose multi-billion dollar budget is being fleeced by white-collar criminals: it is happening throughout the government.

The General Accounting Office, Congress' investigating arm, said its study of seven major agencies, including the GSA, found rampant examples of fraud and related white-collar crimes wherever they looked.

Furthermore, GAO officials said they had no reason to doubt Justice Department estimates that from one per cent to 10 per cent of the $250 billion spent on economic assistance of all kinds is lost through fraud each year.

The GAO report also sharply criticized the Justice Department for failing to act quickly to help root out fraud in the government and take preventive measures.

Moreover, the GAO said the agencies themselves "have not acted aggressively enough to detect fraud in their programs, and their practices are generally inadequate to identify potential fraud."

As a result of the growth in government, the GAO said, "Opportunities for defrauding the government are virtually limitless because of the number, variety and value of federal programs."

The other agencies examined were the Departments of Agriculture, Labor, Transportation, Housing and Urban Development, and the Veterans and Small Business Administrations.

Old Chestnut Surefire Item

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

There can surely be few theatre-goers who have not, at least once in their lives, seen the Brandon Thomas comedy, Charley's Aunt.

Yet whenever a theatre group is looking for a surefire box office success to open or juice up their season, Charley's Aunt is a likely choice.

No matter if one has seen the classic nonsense on the screen or on the stage several times before, anticipation of a good evening's entertainment brings most people back when a revival is at hand.

Victoria Theatre Guild has opted for an hilarious start to the new season by bringing back the enjoyable chestnut for yet another run at Langham Court. It will open there Thursday and run through Sept. 30.

The story, for the newly-come viewers, is set at the turn of the century and revolves around two young college men who coerce a third into impersonating Charley's aunt "from Brazil where the nuts come from" to overcome the necessity of providing a chaperone for meetings with their sweethearts.

Adrian Jarvis has directed the farce. Curtain time is 8:15 and ticket reservations may be made at the box office, 384-2142, from 3:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. daily except Sunday.

A-G Gives Warning On Hockey Violence

Attorney-General Garde Gardom has told organized hockey in B.C. to reduce violence in its games or his ministry will be forced to take action.

Gardom, in a letter to Ernie McLean, chairman of the B.C. Junior Hockey League, says he regrets the fact that the criminal justice system may have to shepherd an activity regarded as being a sport.

"Throw people who fight off the ice," Gardom said in the letter.

"Throw people who counsel fighting and intimidation off the team, and establish monetary sanctions within the system to take care of both of these aspects as well."

The attorney-general said the gate would not be adversely affected because athletes and spectators prefer skill and artistry to "what is now euphemistically known as goon tactics."

Gardom said he was making the letter, dated May 9, public now because he had not received the courtesy of a reply.

Copies of the letter were also sent to the National Hockey League.

BCJHL vice-president Ron Livingston said the league plans to come down hard with suspensions of players and coaches if they get involved in violence on the ice.'

"The attorney-general certainly has grounds for concern and hopefully, if we get tough, we can crack down on violence."

Livingston said junior hockey has a black eye mainly because it involves young players striving to get ahead by showing how tough they are.

He said Gardom's threat was discussed at the league's annual meeting in June but no reply was made because one wasn't requested.

Livingston said the attorney-general released the letter probably as a public notice of warning although, as far as the league was concerned, it wasn't a secret.

The league sent copies to other leagues and discussed the letter with owners and coaches, he said.

Movie Set for Stewart

A movie based on an Alistair Maclean novel is to be shot in and around the northern B.C. community of Stewart.

Stewart has been in the economic doldrums since Granduc Mines closed down its copper operation several months ago.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said the production of Bear Island will inject close to $1.6 million into the area's economy during the six-week filming.

Producer of the $7 million movie is Peter Snell Productions, of the U.K.

The provincial government will come up with $75,000 to keep 51 kilometres of road open between Stewart and Granduc where much of the film will be shot at the copper mine site.

Some $320,000 is to be spent paving the Stewart airport's runway and parking apron.

ROYAL OAK PARK PLAN AGAIN?

Now that Saanich council has rejected a proposed industrial park on Interurban Road, Mayor Mel Couvelier confidently expects that council will be asked to reconsider the earlier proposal for creating such a park at Royal Oak.

But he said Monday he is equally sure that the Royal Oak scheme will be defeated the second time around.

The Royal Oak rezoning was defeated by a 5-4 vote following a public hearing last March. Couvelier then initiated the proposal to locate industry at the Interurban site, but he was the only council member to support the plan at last week's hearing.

The mayor said Monday he expects someone will reintroduce the Royal Oak proposal this year or early in 1979.

On that assumption he is considering asking the planning department to prepare an impact assessment study, similar to the one undertaken for the Interurban scheme.

Couvelier said that since last week's hearing many Saanich residents have called him to express their surprise and dismay that council had rejected a municipal land banking scheme which would have been a major source of tax revenue.

Petition Allowed At Poll Stations

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — City council decided Monday to allow a petition for Canadian unity to be placed in polling stations when the municipal election is held Nov. 13.

The petition was organized by James MacNutt of Charlottetown and J. K. Cowan of Victoria. The petition, circulated by the Ontario Federation for Canadian Unity, says: "We, the undersigned from Waterloo, Ont., along with our fellows from British Columbia to Newfoundland, invite Quebecois members of our Canadian family to remain Canadian and continue building with us this magnificent Canada."

Committees in each of the 10 provinces are circulating the petition with the completed petitions being sent to MacNutt.

Stiffer Rules For Race Urged

CAMPBELL RIVER — A recommendation that the Salmon Festival raft race committee tighten and rigidly enforce safety regulations has been made by a coroner's jury here.

The jury ruled Kenneth Harold Magnusson, 19, drowned accidentally in Campbell River during a practise run before the annual race here this summer.

The jury heard from witnesses that none of the youths wore lifejackets and there were few conditions laid down to qualify for the race.

It recommended that entrants in the raft race be required to wear lifejackets at all times, including practise runs, and that the race committee examine its raft specifications and safety regulations.

It also urged the RCMP to enforce regulations.

Coroner Ken Scott said the festival is a happy event for the community but it seemed the rules were relaxed during the event.

"I have deep concern over this incident," he said. "The police turn their backs on a lot of shenanigans they would not normally allow."

FUND REVAMP EYED

The Universities Council of B.C. may revamp its formula for distributing funds among the province's three universities.

University of Victoria president Dr. Howard Petch said a promise to review the way funds are distributed was among items discussed during a meeting Monday.

The UCBC receives a lump sum from the province every year for division among the universities. Last year UVic and Simon Fraser officials complained the University of B.C. was getting too large a share of the pot.

UVic officials and members of UCBC meet annually to discuss the university operating budget submission, made in August.

UVIC PROF ELECTED

A University of Victoria chemistry professor has been elected president of the Canadian Association for Co-operative education.

Dr. McAuley has been involved in the program since its inception in 1976.

This Man Conquered Cape Horn

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Capt. John Wilson is a master mariner of steam and sail who belongs to the most exclusive marine organization in the world — the Cape Horn Club.

To belong, one has to round Cape Horn in a sailing vessel, be recognized for the feat and be awarded the International Association of Cape Horners of St. Malo's Albatross medal.

The 62-year-old Wilson, who is visiting Victoria, returned to his native Norway six years ago after an absence of 30 years, having roamed the oceans of the world since he set to sea as a 14-year-old cabin boy.

He received his first command in 1949 but Wilson, a "self-taught sailor" considers his last one — the three masted cutter barquentine Regina Maris — the best one of all.

He was master of the 145-foot sailing cargo ship for seven years. During that time he carried out two 15-month voyages and experienced a dismasting during a tornado.

In 1966 and 1977 he sailed her from Norway around Cape Horn and back to Norway again, winning the Albatross medal for his exploit.

In a later 15-month voyage the Regina Maris sailed from Norway around the Cape of Good Hope to Australia.

Two years after receiving the Albatross medal the International Association of Cape Horners of St. Malo honored him again — this time for his promotion of the Cape Horners Club.

The dismasting in September, 1969, came three weeks after his wife Tsui-Yuk (Alice), whom he met in Hong Kong, gave birth to their daughter Marianne.

The Regina Maris was off the Cape Verde Islands, south of the Canary Islands, when the tornado struck. All that were left of the main and mizzen spars were two jagged stumps while the foremast was sheared off right on top of the deckhouse.

Wilson had his wife and daughter aboard at the time and when finally, he went below to change into some warm clothes, he found his wife nursing their daughter.

"I told her we had lost everything, all the rigging is gone," he recalls.

The Regina Maris was towed back to Norway and rerigged with even taller masts and more sail area. The dowager oak vessel, built in 1908, was ready for sea again.

He says it had always been an ambition of his to have one of his children married on the high seas.

It was shortly after Malta had been given its independence by Britain and he managed to persuade Maltese officials to pass legislation, making it lawful under Maltese law to be married on the high seas.

Later, he was to receive an official letter from Malta telling him he "should be proud to make history in Malta."

Wilson's crew aboard the Regina Maris — mostly schoolboys — ranged in numbers from 12 to 16 and came from a variety of countries including Norway, Britain, Germany, Portugal, Spain, the Canary Islands, the United States, Mexico, Argentina, Peru, Chile, Uruguay, France, Curacao and other places.

Wilson, who speaks Norwegian, English, Spanish and German, says his crews always had a sufficient smattering of Emglish to get by.

While in Victoria Wilson received two more honors. He was made a member of the B.C. Maritime Museum and the Thermopylae Club.

Wilson says there have been seafaring folk in his family as far as church records go back — the 16th century — and probably before that.

Gov't Union Preparing For Battle

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

B.C.'s public service employees are gearing for a tough battle with the government next year and giving advance warning that the public could be caught up in the fracas.

John Fryer, general secretary of the 43,000-member B.C. Government Employees Union, said in an interview Monday he feels the government will try to make an example of his members in urging restraint on other employers.

"The government is going to say 'we are going to be tough with our employees and we expect you to be too,' " he said.

Coupled with this attitude, he added, is the morale of the public service employees which the union feels is at an all-time low.

"There are hundreds of brush fires smouldering out there and you can't contain them if you don't deal fairly with people," Fryer said.

He said the B.C. government will be goaded in its contract negotiations with its employees by a mood across Canada which seems to be saying it is open season on the public service.

"We are bound to be caught up in all that."

The master agreement for 37,000 government employees expires July 31, 1979. Most of the other 6,000 union members' contracts expire at different dates throughout the year.

Fryer said in the summer of 1977 the union came within eight hours of a strike and at that time threatened to shut down the government liquor stores.

This time, he said, the union has other tricks up its sleeve which might inconvenience the elite more than ordinary citizens.

He said the union might shut down medical services pian offices and prevent any cheques being mailed out to doctors.

Fryer said wages likely won't be the top priority when negotiations begin, probably in June.

He said the union will focus on the contracting out of work, occupational health and safety and benefits for retired members.

More Hazards Face Posting

More Victoria hotels and apartments will soon be posted with fire hazard notices, Fire Chief Eric Simmons said today.

Simmons refused to identify the buildings but said they are among 12 apartments and seven hotels his inspectors have found deficient in fire safety features.

On Monday Victoria fire inspector Ray Best and the city's chief building inspector Ron Walker met Empress manager Ted Balderson and CP Hotel's senior engineer Ed Steele to discuss the problems.

Steele refused to comment on the outcome of the talks which lasted more than two hours and Balderson was unavailable for comment.

The notices list several deficiencies in the 65-year-old hotel including an obsolete fire alarm system, a lack of smoke and heat detectors, and inadequate fire doors and room doors.

The cost of upgrading the building would run into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Simmons said the hotel has 60 days to either file an appeal or get the work done.

Even if work is started the notices will remain in place until all fire safety standards are met, he said.

Simmons said if nothing is done he is required by bylaw to take the matter up with city council.

UIC Dumping 200 a Month in City

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Local unemployment insurance payments have been cut by $500,000 since May, due in part to a spot check system that weeds out those not entitled to benefits, Victoria Canada Employment Centre manager Stan Purdy said today.

"We are catching as many as 200 a month," he said.

This summer, letters have gone out to 600 UIC cheque recipients per month, inviting them to a counselling session on local job opportunities.

"Anyone not showing up is automatically disqualified from further UIC benefits because they are not available for work."

Some weeks this disqualification total runs as high as 32 per cent, he said.

Purdy said people fail to show up for one of three reasons: they know they are not actively seeking work, they have a job offer somewhere but they had been waiting for their benefits to run out before accepting it or they are out of town.

Purdy said those out of town often are on holidays in California or Hawaii and are not eligible for UIC because they are not actively looking for work.

The irony is they could remain eligible by checking in with the Canada Employment Centre before leaving Victoria.

Someone going for a three-week holiday would have his benefits halted for that three-week period but could resume his benefits when he returns.

However, someone leaving town without informing the Canada Employment Centre is automatically disqualified from further benefits.

Purdy said spot checks had been carried out on a piecemeal basis in the past but now they are a regular feature of the local Manpower-UIC operation.

Another 600 people are being invited to a UIC counselling session this month and those not showing up will be disqualified.

Partly as a result of this program, the UIC payout in the Victoria area in August totalled $3 million, down $500,000 from $3.5 million in May.

Improving economic conditions was another factor in the decline.

The Victoria unemployment rate, in real terms, was 7.1 per cent in August, down from 9.5 per cent the previous August. The improvement was due mainly to strength in tourism and the forest products industry.

There were 7,824 looking for work in August, down from 10,549 at the same time one year ago.

There were 7,072 new claims for UIC benefits in the Victoria area during August, down from 7,463 at the same time last year.

Purdy said the main purpose of the spot checks is to help Victorians find suitable jobs. Weeding out those not entitled to UIC benefits is a side effect.

The spot check program has become a regular feature now that Manpower has merged with UIC at the Canada Employment Centre, 810 Fort.

Purdy said information services are also being expanded.

"We soon will be installing an audio-visual device that will answer the most common questions about unemployment insurance."

The machine will run continuously, near the reception area of the building. In a three-and-a-quarter minute presentation it will explain how to become eligible for benefits and what the waiting period is.

"I was exasperated in looking over our pamphlets because of all the jargon. None of the pamphlets explained what everyone wanted to know: when do I get my cheque?"

Purdy said the pamphlets talk about a two-week waiting period but it is four weeks before the first cheque arrives. This is not explained in any of the pamphlets, he said, but will be spelled out clearly in the audio-visual display.

Purdy said about 10,000 people in the Victoria area are collecting UIC benefits and he expected the total to stay fairly level during the winter.

Unemployment would increase, he said, but not all would be eligible for UIC benefits.

Taxi Driver Robbed

A police spokesman said Dale Eugene Friend, 27, of Victoria Taxi, was driving in the 1500-block Pandora about 2 a.m. when he was pulled to the curb by two men in another car.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you settle an argument for me? Does the United States have the largest number of Nobel prize winners? G.A.

A. Yes. The U.S. has 94 — 23 for physics, 15 for chemistry, 29 for medicine-physiology, six for literature, 15 for peace and six for economics.

VIPs . . . Very In-Persons

He was among 3,000 attending an Up With People song-and-dance show.

During a medley of international songs, cast members went into the audience to get volunteers for a conga line and the lieutenant-governor went up on stage to join in.

He had met the young performers at a reception at Government House earlier in the week.

Also among the spontaneous performers was University of Victoria president Howard Petch. As a member of the audience he sang a chorus into a microphone when cast members went hunting for volunteers.

The University of Victoria is getting into the record business.

One album of classical music has already been recorded at UVic's acoustic marvel, the University Centre, and there may be more to come says Ethan Sloane, clarinetist and music department professor.

The album was made for Crystal Records of Los Angeles, a small connoisseur label specializing in obscure and rare works.

UVic's music department wants to work out a contract with Crystal or some other small label to produce a minimum of four recordings a year at the auditorium.

He's still being a bit coy in his intentions but he'll talk your head off about the poor way things are being done in the municipality and is sounding more and more like a man who's seriously contemplating getting back into the political arena.

* * *

Procrastination pays off or pong with the wind.

It was Bunn, nostrils flaring slightly at the prospect of paying out about $400 in taxpayer cash, who prevailed when other members of council considered trucking away stinky seaweed off Willows Beach.

Rather than have this done, said Bunn, why not wait a while and see what might happen ?

Monday night, aldermen learned that nature in her own wondrous way (wind and tide actually) had taken care of the situation.

TOWN TALK

Who says those Toronto-based magazines that purport to cover the news across the country don't have a clue about what's happening beyond the Rockies.?

That's just B.C. paranoia, right?

Well, Saturday's issue of Weekend Magazine, published in Toronto and carried as a supplement to the Victoria Times, contained an article on Rhodes scholars with an accompanying list of 25 winners who have attained prominent positions.

Davis was fired from his cabinet post April 3 — 5½ months ago — when it was learned RCMP were investigating his handling of airline tickets.

Grads' Chance Better But Competition Fierce

A post secondary education doesn't guarantee a higher paying job anymore, but university graduates have a greater chance of finding work than less educated young adults, according to the latest Statistics Canada survey.

In a 400-page book titled Out of School — Into the Labor Force, StatsCan says recent university graduates heading into the work force find the competition fierce.

More than one-third of all young peope entering the labor force now have degrees or some kind of post-secondary training.

The most startling impact of the over-supply of university grads is revealed in wage trends of the last 10 years.

In 1968, starting salaries for university graduates were 18 per cent higher than the average industrial wage, now they are 12 below it.

But the well-educated young adults have a much better chance of finding work.

Spring unemployment for 15 to 24-year-olds averaged 23.2 per cent for those with an elementary education, but only 5.4 per cent for degree holders.

Disinfectants Sprayed As Toll Mounts After Quake

Times News Services

TABAS, Iran — Light planes sprayed disinfectants today to ward off epidemics caused by Iran's worst earthquake in a decade and the world's worst earthquake to date this year.

As many as 20,000 deaths are now feared and an estimated 6,000 persons believed injured by the devastation at the oasis town of Tabas and 100 surrounding villages, some 500 miles southeast of Tehran, 40 of which were destroyed.

Tabas was the worst hit, with only 2,000 of its 13,000 inhabitants surviving, many of them injured.

The strong aroma of the disinfectants was tainted by the noticeable evidence of death as diggers wearing white masks shovelled through tons of rubble three days after the massive tremor flattened the garden city of date groves, melons, orchards and cotton fields.

Cloth-wrapped bodies, some frozen in grotesque postures of sudden death, were lined up under palm trees, while the gravediggers worked, unable to keep ahead of the steady stream of dead.

Friends and relatives identified the dead as workers pulled the bodies from the rubble. The living slapped and struck themselves in the ritual of grief.

The Iranian army sent 700 soldiers, four medical teams and numerous rescue workers to help in relief operations.

And the Iranian air force flew dozens of flights Monday to take the injured to Tehran, where air force commander Lt. Gen. Amir Hossein Rabii supervised the transfer to military hospitals equipped to cope with complicated treatment.

One such flight ended in tragedy. Nine persons, including an air force general and two civilian women, died

CRASH KILLS WOMAN

Colwood RCMP said the woman was the driver and sole occupant of a car that smashed into a rock face and flipped over near Kangaroo Road at 12:05 a.m.

A spokesman said Mrs. Holstein was pinned under the vehicle and died instantly from head injuries.

Ambulance driver Robert Leard, 35, was unhurt.

The ambulance was on an emergency run to McDonald's restaurant at Saanich and Oak where a man and woman had overdosed on drugs.

The two, who were in the back of a truck parked in the restaurant lot, were taken to Royal Jubilee by another ambulance.

VORSTER STALLS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Prime Minister John Vorster kept South Africans guessing today about whether he will step down from office, delaying an expected announcement until at least Wednesday and fueling an already bitter battle over a successor.

OCT. 18 SET FOR SASK. VOTE

REGINA (CP) — A general election will be held in Saskatchewan on Wednesday, Oct. 18, Premier Allan Blakeney announced today.

Blakeney was expected to call an election for this fall after Prime Minister Trudeau indicated there would be no federal election until the spring.

Saskatchewan's NDP government came to power in 1971 and was returned in June, 1975.

Blakeney normally would have sought another mandate next June, but Canada's only NDP premier did not want a federal and provincial election at the same time.

PEACE THREAT

OAS to Mediate Nicaragua Crisis

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The permanent council of the Organization of American States (OAS), concerned that the political crisis in Nicaragua poses a threat to peace in the Caribbean, voted Monday to convene a meeting of OAS foreign ministers Thursday to mediate the situation.

Even as the council met, Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza's troops were reported massing for an assault on the last major rebel stronghold, the northwest town of Esteli.

Observers said the national guard, Somoza's army, flew combat-toughened troops to Somoto, 64 kilometres north of Esteli, in a flanking movement Monday.

The OAS council ruled that a foreign ministers meeting is in order because of events "which affect the peace, and which create a situation of an urgent nature and of common interest for the nations of the hemisphere."

Among the 25 OAS nations, Paraguay cast the lone dissenting vote and Trinidad abstained.

Venezuelan Ambassador Jose Machin, who made the proposal 10 days ago, said a situation of "true genocide" prevails in Nicaragua. He accused Nicaragua's National Guard of placing women and children in the line of fire to discourage leftist guerrillas from shooting.

He said U.S. and South Vietnamese mercenaries have gone to Nicaragua to defend the regime of President Somoza.

Nicaraguan Ambassador Guillermo Sevilla-Sacasa blamed the Somoza regime's problems on international terrorism, "which counts on the support of Venezuela."

Venezuela sent a squadron of planes to Costa Rica following reports last week that Nicaraguan planes strafed an area in northern Costa Rica near its border with Nicaragua. Costa Rica has no military forces of its own.

Nicaragua contends that leftist guerrillas have been using Costa Rica as a springboard for attacks on the Somoza regime.

Sevilla-Sacasa said leftist guerrillas who attacked the Nicaraguan border town of Penas Blancas over the weekend had support from an unidentified plane. He suggested the plane was part of the squadron Venezuela had sent to Costa Rica.

He said communism is to blame for the accelerating political crisis in Nicaragua, which began four weeks ago with a successful Sandinista guerrilla attack on the National Palace in Managua.

Meanwhile in Nicaragua, informed sources said the guard probably will push into Esteli from the south and north while bottling the city up with ambushes on three rural roads that wind up into the surrounding hills. This might prevent the rebels escaping as they did when the guard recaptured Masaya in the south and Leon and Chinandega in the northwest.

MAIL STRIKES BEGIN FRIDAY

OTTAWA (CP) — The 19,000-member Letter Carriers Union of Canada will begin rotating strikes across the country Friday to back contract demands, officials announced today.

Union president Robert McGarry told a news conference the decision not to call a full-scale national walkout was made to allow for delivery of family allowance and old age pension cheques mailed by the federal government at the end of the month.

McGarry said there are no talks scheduled between the federal government and union negotiators to divert the midnight Thursday strike deadline.

McGarry said the federal government's refusal to resume negotiations, stalled on the question of wage increases, is "irresponsible."

The mail carriers have asked for a six-per-cent increase in basic salaries as well as a cost-of-living adjustment to protect the membership from past and future inflation.

Prime Minister Trudeau has threatened to legislate an end to any postal strike if it damaged the economy.

Davis Fined, On Probation

A total of 15 years of elected office for Jack Davis came to an end Monday when he was fined and placed on probation for fraud — the same day he announced his resignation as an MLA.

Davis, a former federal and B.C. cabinet minister, appeared shaken and disoriented outside Vancouver county court after he was fined $1,000 and placed on two months probation for defrauding the provincial government.

"I don't understand," he said. "Naturally I feel terrible."

Davis, 62, was convicted Sept. 11 of defrauding the B.C. government of $1,074 by misrepresenting his travel expenses. Court was told he exchanged first-class tickets for economy and kept the cash difference.

Davis's resignation as Social Credit MLA for North Vancouver-Seymour was made to Speaker Harvey Schroeder Friday and announced in court Monday.

It is not clear when a byelection might be held to fill the seat.

The Constitution Act says the Speaker "may" notify the deputy provincial secretary upon receipt of an MLA's resignation and the deputy then has six months to issue an election writ.

Whether Davis would be eligible to run in a byelection is also uncertain and it is unknown whether he would even consider such a step.

In Kelowna, Premier Bill Bennett said in a prepared statement he regretted what Davis had gone through and thanked the former minister for his long service to the province.

"It is difficult to accept the reality of a colleague's announced resignation under such unfortunate circumstances. Those of us who are in public life realize how difficult it can be and we accept that."

Bennett gave no indication when a byelection might be called.

Sherman Hood, lawyer for Davis, argued in court that an absolute discharge would be appropriate since the fraud charge, trial and conviction had already damaged his client significantly.

He said Davis' removal from the cabinet, public disgrace, loss of position and income as well as his resignation as MLA amounted to punishment exceeding the seriousness of the crime.

But Judge J. J. Anderson, although expressing personal sympathy for Davis's "agonizing embarrassment and humiliation" and acknowledging his long public service, said a breach of public trust had occurred.

Syria, Jordan Reject Accord

Times News Services

Saudi Arabia and Jordan have both rejected the Middle East peace agreement worked out at Camp David.

But the statement hinted that Saudi Arabia would not oppose Egypt's efforts to regain its occupied territory from Israel.

"In spite of its reservations, the Saudi government does not consider that it has a right to interfere in the internal affairs of any Arab country or to oppose such a country's right to regain its lost territories by way of armed struggle or through peaceful efforts as long as these do not contradict the higher Arab interests," the statement said.

NEWS BRIEFS

Kent Turned Back

TORONTO (CP) — Peter Kent, CBC's new African correspondent, was to begin his first assignment in Rhodesia but was refused entry and is now back in London, a CBC executive producer said today.

Poison Cloud

GENOA, Italy (AP) — The wrong mixing of chemicals set off a cloud of poison from a tanning plant in the centre of this northern port city today, killing at least three persons and sending dozens of others to hospitals, police reported.

Blood Liquefies

NAPLES, Italy (UPI) — The dark crystallized substance Neapolitans believe to be the blood of St. Januarius liquefied on schedule today to the sound of firecrackers and wild applause from a crowd of 8,000.

Air Strike Ends

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Mexico's air traffic controllers ended a two-day walkout today, allowing thousands of stranded passengers, including hundreds of American tourists, to resume their travels.

Greta Calmer

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Hurricane Greta crossed Belize today and was downgraded to a tropical storm as its winds dropped to 115 kilometres an hour. The hurricane wrecked hundreds of huts along the north coast of Honduras, but there were no reports of casualties yet.

Investors Sell Canadian $$

Times News Services

Heavy selling on international money markets Monday pushed the dollar down three-eighths of a cent against its American counterpart.

In New York at noon today, the dollar was down 3/25 at 85.42.

Traders described the market Monday as "one-way down" with big investors quickly selling their Canadian dollars for currencies they felt were more secure.

The financial daily quoted market participants as questioning an apparent lack of policy by Ottawa to deal with the dollar's slide.

The U.S. dollar weakened today on most major European money markets. Dealers said the optimism over Middle East peace prospects, which pushed up exchange rates Monday, has faded.

CONSUMER CREDIT UP 14%

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer credit on the books of monthly-reporting credit holders totalled $27.1 billion at the end of July, up 14.4 per cent from a year earlier, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

Most of the total, $20.9 billion, was accounted for by chartered bank personal loans. The increase over the year in that category was 16.7 per cent.

Sales finance and consumer loan company loans were valued at $2.8 billion, while loans owed by consumers to department, furniture and appliance stores totalled $1.4 billion. Policy loans by life insurance companies were valued at $1.3 billion and personal loans by trust and mortgage companies totalled $580 million.

Including quarterly reporting firms, the total consumer credit at the end of the second quarter of 1978 was $33.4 billion, up 13.8 per cent from a year earlier.

Weaker Growth in '79 Forecast

OTTAWA (CP) — A weaker outlook for the U.S. economy and a new restrictive federal spending policy mean reduced economic growth in 1979, a major economic forecasting agency predicted today.

The Conference Board in Canada, which includes representation from business, labor and government sectors, said in a quarterly forecast that the economy will expand at a real rate of 3.7 per cent next year compared with four per cent this year.

In July, before the recent announcement of federal spending cuts, the board had predicted growth in 1979 of 4.1 per cent.

As growth of five per cent is required annually for a reduction in unemployment, the jobless rate is expected to continue rising throughout both years to nine per cent.

The board predicted an increase in the consumer price index this year of nine per cent, with moderation to 7.5 per cent next year.

Lawrence Murphy, chief economist with the board, said federal spending cuts of about $2 billion in the 1979-80 fiscal year, which were announced recently by Finance Minister Jean Chretien and Treasury Board President Robert Andras, could reduce growth by one-quarter of a percentage point.

But he said this negative impact could be offset through income tax cuts. Chretien has promised a budget later this year which could provide an opportunity for the government to cut taxes.

Murphy said the four increases in the Bank of Canada interest rate since last February, plus a downward revision announced last week in money supply growth, will "tend to choke off" investment and consumer spending.

These would reinforce the restrictive influence of the government's spending cuts, he said.

The board forecast also notes that since early 1975 economic growth in the U.S. has been vigorous, leading to demand for exports.

"More recently growth in output in that country has moderated and prospects are for an even more severe slowdown in 1979," the board says.

"This implies that exports of goods from Canada will decelerate and, consequently, the balance of trade will no longer be the chief source of economic expansion."

An increase in exports of merchandise exports of 8.7 per cent this year will fall to about 3.4 per cent in 1979 and there will be a continuing deterioration in the services side of the trade balance, the board predicts.

Inflation, led by food price increases, has eroded household incomes and thereby reduced spending on consumer goods and weakened the investment climate, the board says.

Total consumer spending in real terms will grow by four per cent this year, dropping to about 3.5 per cent in 1979 in response to higher direct and indirect taxes, the board said.

Next month, retail sales taxes in most provinces rise to their levels of last April as the federally-inspired reduction in the tax ends.
